OBSTACLES TO THE KANSAS

REMOVED

FAKE HORSE RACE GAME IS PULLED OFF.

Two Alleged Bunco Steerers in County Jail Charged With the Offense.

A telephone message from a woman caused the arrest of P. L. Perry, Albert Miller and Richard Krug by the police Monday night as reported in yesterday's Gazette, and resulted in the two first named being taken to the county jail yesterday on a charge of defrauding Krug out of $396.

Krug was under the influence of drugs and until yesterday was unable to give a clear account of the manner in which he claims to have been robbed.
His story is that he chanced to meet Perry and Miller in Manitou a day or two after he came here from Hudson Kan. and that in subsequent conversation with them they decided to play the races.

It was the old game—the one which Krug declares he fell for—he wanted to bet on horse races and his new found friends knew how to accommodate him. They had inside information of races in Oklahoma. It was claimed and the trio was in to make a killing. Sure enough, in the first alleged bet the men are said to have lost Krug that there was a cleanup of about $6,000. Then, the story goes, it was decided to wager the whole amount on another sure thing. This time it is alleged there was a misunderstanding, and when it was too late it was discovered that the money had been laid on the wrong horse.
Krug stood to lose $396, but before he started to plunge he had wired to his bank in Hudson for a $300 draft.
He had $95 on deposit here and it is said he handed the full amount in cash to his acquaintances.

Then it is said, Perry and Miller allied Morgan told Krug that it would be better to go where bets could be better handled. A ticket was purchased for Krug and he expected to leave on a train at 1 o'clock Monday evening for Oklahoma City. The other Krug says were to follow the next day.

Fruit Drugged.
Monday afternoon, Krug and one of the men drove around in a buggy east of town. Krug says he did not take a drink but says he ate some bananas.
It is believed that these were drugged.
Returning from the buggy, ride early in the evening, the actions of the three men around Weber and Cimarron streets aroused suspicion and a woman telephoned the police. Detective Gavin was sent out on the case and took the three men to headquarters.

Perry had $1,040 in his clothes and wore a big diamond. Miller had $87 in cash and a diamond. While Krug's effects consisted of $18 in money and a railroad ticket. Krug was in such shape from drugs Monday night that the police could not get a connected story from him and he also believed that he was liable to punishment for betting on the races. When he learned yesterday that there was no charge against him, however, he told a straightforward story.

Complaints against Perry and Miller, charging that they obtained $986 from Krug by means of a confidence game, were filed in Justice Dunnington's court yesterday.

In the arrests the police believe they have a pair of clever confidence men.
It is thought also that a third man, supposed to be connected with the present case, is in Colorado Springs, or was until Monday evening, at least. The police have information that leads them to believe that a third man was waiting in South park until Krug had been started southeast on a train. He is said to have gone to Colorado City immediately after Perry and Miller were arrested and to have informed a saloonkeeper. The latter called up the police and asked that the two men be taken care of.

Krug lives in Hudson, Kan., and came here July 7. He told his new found friends, he says, that he owns land worth about $3,000 and that he had notes in the bank amounting to $1,700.
He is about 40 years old and from his appearance would be taken for a man in comfortable circumstances.

MARSHAL DIES OF WOUNDS
DENVER, July 18.—Jacob Kipper, night marshal of Rocky Ford, who was shot in the mouth by Robert Harris, a negro, on July 4, died early this morning at St. Joseph's hospital.
Kipper was brought to Denver several days ago and was operated upon.
Chief of Police J. E. Craig, of Rocky Ford, was killed by a bullet from the same negro's gun. At the time of the shooting the officers were endeavoring to arrest Harris.

Attorneys General to Discuss Railroad Rate Litigation in August

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 18.—
Attorney General Major, at the request of Attorney General West of Oklahoma, has called a conference of 10 attorneys general to be held in St. Louis, August 4, for the discussion of pending railroad rate litigation.

The appeal from the decision of federal Judge Smith McPherson, declaring the Missouri 2-cent passenger rate law unconstitutional, will be heard in the United States supreme court in October.
Attorneys general from the following states will attend the St. Louis conference: Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Oregon, Arkansas, South Dakota, Kentucky and Minnesota.

of Organization's Work.
Yellowstone National park, when compared with your city among the mountains is so far eclipsed that it is not worth mentioning, yesterday said
E. Clarence Jones, New York city, president and head of the executive committee of the American Embassy association which recently obtained from Congress a $500,000 yearly appropriation to be used in establishing residences in foreign countries for American ambassadors thus relieving the condition which made it necessary for a foreign representative of this country to be a multimillionaire.

Mr. Jones is an enthusiastic about Colorado Springs as he is about the work his association has just accomplished.
"Your Chamber of Commerce was one of the first of 400 to endorse our work and to volunteer assistance," he said.
"As he stood ready to take for Denver at the Rio Grande station. I came here purposefully today to see members of our association who live here, to thank them for their assistance in getting our bill passed."

Colorado Springs Wonderful.
"I wish I could stay here for the rest of the summer," said Mr. Jones as he began to talk on the beauties of the Pikes Peak region and the opinion he first gained of Colorado Springs. Instead of the quiet summering place I expected to find here, your city is so live and up-to-date that it surpasses anything I've seen in the western country. In Seattle, Wash., and Colo-

Much Entertainment Is Planned for Delegates to State Labor Meeting

The Colorado Springs Federated Trades council has announced elaborate plans for the entertainment of delegates to the sixteenth annual convention of the Colorado State Federation of Labor, which will meet in this city
August 14 to 20 inclusive.

On Monday, August 14, after the formal opening of the convention and an address of welcome by Mayor Avery, a recess will be taken and the visiting delegates escorted on a trolley ride over Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou. The Midland band will accompany the party. Late in the afternoon, after the convention adjourns for the day, a street car ride will be taken to Nob hill and the Union Printers home.

A dance at the Stratton park pavilion will be held Tuesday night, with F. G.
Fink's orchestra in attendance. Those of the visitors who prefer a band concert will be taken through the park to hear the Midland band.

A smoker at Temple theater will be one of the big features of the entertainment program. Sparring contests, excellent matches, vaudeville stunts, etc., and music by Barney's orchestra, are among the good things on tap for the guests. While the men are enjoying themselves at the smoker, their wives and ladies will be given a reception and theater party at one of the theaters. Special attention will be given to the ladies during the entire convention.

The Alamo hotel has been selected as headquarters, and a number of prominent national labor leaders have been invited to attend the convention, which is expected to be the largest ever held by the state body.

FOUR WITNESSES BELIEVE FORMER TESTIMONY.

Hines Employees Bear Him Out in Statements While Cigar Man Does Not.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—More contradictory testimony before the Senate Lumber investigation committee today befogged the investigation far worse than at any time since the new inquiry began. A four witness case today brought important testimony before the committee.
Charles M. Wain, a young lawyer, did not deny the testimony of F. W.
Wain, secretary of the Edward Hines Lumber company, that a remark on the Washington Post was made by him from Duluth, Minn., on March 1, 1911, that there was a jackpot raised to $100,000 to elect a lumberman to the presidency. Wain did make a remark in the presence of himself and a young Canadian.

E. A. Johns, of Chicago, until July 1, 1911, general staff representative of the American Lumberman, testified positively that while made no such statement.
Ivan Baker, a buyer for the Edward Hines Lumber company, unqualifiedly denied that Edward Hines, president of this company, said over a long distance telephone to Springfield, Ill., on May 26, 1909, that he would come to Springfield with all the money necessary for Lorimer's election. Cook testified Hines did so state. Baker's testimony regarding the conversation agreed almost verbatim with that given by Hines.

Tells Same Tale as Hines.
Baker also agreed with Hines as count of Hines meeting Clarence S.
Funk, general manager of the International Harvester company, who claims Hines asked him for a $10,000 Lorimer election contribution. Hines says Funk asked to be introduced to Lorimer and for the privilege of contributing to his campaign expenses.
Baker told about the introduction request as Hines had testified.
Donald M. Frame, cigar employee in the Union League club testified that Hines once remarked to H. M. Hettler that he (Hines) had elected Lorimer thus corroborating Hettler's testimony and contradicting Hines.

McGowan was subjected to a rigid cross-examination. He said that all the men in the smoking car when Burgess said the Wiehe conversation took place were strangers to him at that time but that he remembered where each sat and the order in which they left the smoker. Instead of Wiehe remaining in the smoker until all the party of eight or ten men left, except Burgess and McGowan, the witness said Wiehe was the first to depart.

Declares Affidavit Correct.
Later McGowan declared to be correct an affidavit he had made a few weeks ago in which he said Wiehe was continually in the presence of some of his party all the way from Duluth to Virginia. Minn. Attorney John H. Marble for the committee pointed out that the witness could not know with whom Wiehe was after he left the smoker.
I must have misunderstood the affidavit," said McGowan.
The witness said that he heard everything that was said during the trip and he was sure nothing was said about Lorimer. The tariff and reciprocity were discussed but he was unable to tell what anyone said about either.

Johnson disagreed with Burgess about Wiehe remaining in the smoking room after the witness had left.
Johnson will be cross-examined tomorrow.

McManigal's Grand Jury Testimony Is Given to Public

LOS ANGELES, Cal. July 18.—Judge Walter Bordwell dismissed today contempt proceedings brought against Mrs. Orlie McManigal for her refusal to testify before the grand jury in the Los Angeles Times explosion case in connection with which her husband and John J. and James E. McNamara are under indictment for murder.

The defense halting this action as a victory protecting all the numerous witnesses from danger of being quizzed before the grand jury made public a certified transcript of Orlie McManigal's testimony before the grand jury. This copy was offered as part of the defense's objection to the attempt to compel Mrs. McManigal one of its witnesses to talk to the grand jury, but it was not needed, because Judge Bordwell acted without waiting for negative argument. W. Joseph Ford, assistant district attorney, protested and said the prosecution either would appeal or would file a new affidavit on the subject.

McManigal's testimony, according to the transcript, told the grand jury that James McNamara admitted blowing up the Times building. James, brother John secretary of the International Union of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, fared better in the testimony, being credited with telling James and McManigal to communicate with the old man on the coast and learn what to do.

Mentions Labor Leader
The witness said she learned that the old man's name was Twitmore. Olaf A. Twitmore, president of the Asiatic Exclusion league and a San Francisco labor leader also was a witness before the grand jury. McManigal said he got few instructions from John J. McNamara, when in the latter's office but that he knew before what the plans were. He painted a lively picture of the scene in John J.'s office following the report of the Times explosion and said that John J. sent him to the coast to dynamite the Llewellyn Iron works at Los Angeles and paid him for it.

According to the transcript of the grand jury testimony McManigal said she met James E. McNamara first in December 1909. He declared that in November, 1910, while he and J. E. McNamara were in the woods at Conover, Wis. the latter told McManigal that he had blown up the Times building.

McManigal testified that he first knew J. E. McNamara under that name, but later as J. B. Bryce, and after he came from the coast, as Frank Sullivan.

Where you present with J. B. McNamara and J. J. McNamara in the latter's office when the question was discussed as to what J. B. McNamara was coming to the coast for?

"I did not get much of that in indication that he had there. It was almost all settled before I got there."

Carried Informal Machines.
McManigal said James E. McNamara had two suit cases and a dozen clocks for informal machines, but did not mention dynamite.

"But as we were getting ready they also had a suit case prepared for me to take up, part of it was to be left in Milwaukee, part of it was to be taken to Duluth."

"J. J. told J. B. as we were getting ready to leave: 'You go out there and get in touch with Clancey, and Clancey will make you acquainted with the bunch around there.' He says: 'You meet the old man out there and he will tell you what is to be done.' By mentioning the old man, I learned his name was Twitmore."

McManigal, at Indianapolis, had received $345 in all. He also declared before the jury that a piece of machinery shown him was an informal machine. James E. McNamara had in custody and explained how an explosion could be caused by it. Before the case of Mrs. McManigal was called today, her husband, George Behm, was called to the grand jury, but was excused until Thursday, the prosecution presuming he would not be questioned until the court decided in the proceeding against his wife.

"BILLION DOLLAR" POLICE STAFF OF CHICAGO TO GO

CHICAGO, July 18.—Chief of Police Mcweeney has recalled the stars worn by the "Billion Dollar" personal staff of the superintendent of police number 150 and composed of presidents of banks, heads of corporations, merchants, lawyers, judges and politicians. The custom of having a personal staff composed of prominent citizens whose principal duty was to wear a star has been in vogue for 15 years. Among those who have been asked to surrender their stars are Lieutenant Governor Oglesby, J. Ogden Armour and Edward F. Swift.

COAST ARTILLERY MAKES PERFECT TARGET RECORD

NEW YORK, July 18.—A record at target shooting made at the Sandy Hook proving grounds by the One Hundred and Thirty seventh company, coast artillery corps, has just been announced by the government officials. Fire was directed against a floating target which was towed past the Fort Hancock batteries. Three-inch rapid fire rifles were used and 18 rounds were fired. Every shot made a bull's eye.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. RANEE MULLIN, 2723 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration. If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and you will receive a free trial bottle.

REPORTS FROM FOREIGN CROPS AVAILABLE

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(Off.) At reports of foreign crops received by the department of agriculture at 11 a. m. today indicate that generally favorable conditions existed in June conditions in Canada are over most of the territory pronounced better than in the 10,000,000 acres under wheat this season more than 9,000,000 are in the spring, wheat provinces of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta. The province of Ontario amounted to 1,000,000 acres. The spring wheat lands have been saturated by opportune rains and with some exceptions favorable for long temperatures.

In Europe winter wheat and rye on the whole have fully maintained their former promise. The wheat crop of the United Kingdom, an increased area is recorded likely to furnish an average yield. France with diminished area under both wheat and rye promises a medium return of the former and a less satisfactory one of the latter.

Russia reported to have an excellent report a recent official estimate placing wheat at 15,000,000 bushels, a little higher than the small wheat crop of 1910. Rye is not quite up to the standard and rye is expected to show a considerable shortage. The Hungarian wheat crop is officially estimated at 15,000,000 bushels and rye at 4,000,000 bushels.

In Italy better yields than last year are anticipated but heavy rains may later show their effects on quality.

In Argentina the new sown wheat oats and flax seed are said under the influence of plentiful moisture to have germinated well. Areas are believed to be increased so popular opinion puts the surface under wheat 10 to 15 per cent over the 19,000,000 a record last year.

The 1910 wheat crop of Chile is reported insufficient for home needs and imports are being made from Australia.

The monsoon, the indispensable precursor of a favorable seed time on unirrigated soil in British Guiana broke in full force in mid June and heavy rains have already fallen over large areas. Late reports however indicate partial cessation of rainfall. Cotton planting is progressing in most localities of the empire.

The harvest in progress on the north coast of Africa is said to promise well in Algeria on the much less important provinces of Tunis and Morocco only a moderate outcome is expected. According to the June official report the yield on the 1,250,000 acres of wheat in Egypt was likely to be good in upper Egypt but in lower Egypt not quite up to that standard.

CROP REPORT AUGUST 9

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The department crop report showing the conditions of principal crops on August 1 will be issued at 2 15 Wednesday August 9. It will also announce the preliminary estimate of yield and quality of winter wheat the acreage of wheat hay rye and stocks of oats and barley in farmers hands on August 1.

The report showing the condition of the cotton crop on July 25 will be issued Wednesday, August 2 at noon.

INVESTIGATING KANSAS CITY PRODUCE EXCHANGE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 18.—The federal government has begun an investigation as to whether the Kansas City Fruit and Produce exchange has violated the federal antitrust laws. Miss Edith Miller, special agent of the department of commerce and labor, arrived in Kansas City today to gather information concerning the workings of the exchange. Miss Miller will remain here until A. F. Evans, special commissioner in the state's outer suit against the exchange hands down his decision. The suit is under the Missouri antitrust law.

WATERY FESTERS DRIED IN SCABS.
Would Dig and Scratch Her Face. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Was Cured.

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very itchy, watery eruption, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite well, and when she was at night she would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time."

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from Cuticura, which he said came from her teeth. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, Soap and Ointment at the drugstore. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she has never been troubled with Cuticura since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. ELEANOR CRANDER, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have tried the usual remedies and found them wanting, a liberal sample of each, with 30-p. book on the skin, will be sent post-free on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 24 N. 2nd St., New York, N. Y.

THIEF SHOT WHILE TRYING TO ROB TRAIN PASSENGERS

BELLE PLAINE, Ia., July 18.—A bandit who attempted to hold up the occupants of a Pullman sleeping car on eastbound Northwestern passenger train No. 8 at an early hour today lies in a local hospital with a bullet wound in his side. His name is William Morris and said his home was in Plainfield, N. J.

The wound was inflicted by Arthur Morris, train brakeman who subdued the bandit after a hard struggle. When the train was between Tama and Belle Plaine the occupants of the car were awakened by William Morris as he calls himself who demanded, in loud tones that they surrender their money and other valuables. While the surprised passengers were hurrying to comply with the order the brakeman slipped into the car and got the drop on the bandit. The latter resisted and the brakeman fired one shot which entered the outlaw's side. He was brought to Belle Plaine and placed in a hospital where his condition is pronounced dangerous.

MASSACHUSETTS' NEW ELECTION LAW RIGID

BOSTON, July 18.—The new Massachusetts corrupt practice act is pronounced an epoch making enactment and is likely to be widely copied by other state legislatures this winter. The previous law failed because there was no incentive for anybody to enforce it.

The new act provides that "whoever is convicted of violating the law relating to corrupt practices in elections shall be deemed ineligible to hold public office for three years, and if a person elected to public office is convicted of corrupt practices, his office shall be vacated and a new election held."

This holds out an inducement to defeated candidates and defeated parties to take the initiative in bringing offenders into court.

Another provision restricts any candidate from spending more than $25 for each 1,000 voters in his district. The hiring of workers at the polls is no longer permissible.

FIRE DAMAGES LAUNCH

CHICAGO, July 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Leverett of Jacksonville, Fla., who cruised up the Mississippi river and through the drainage canal in Chicago in a finely fitted steel launch narrowly escaped death when the superstructure of the launch was destroyed by fire at midnight in the Lincoln Park lagoon. Mrs. Leverett stumbled in the dense smoke and sprained her ankle while groping for five canary birds in cages in the cabin.

The couple were aroused from sleep by an odor of smoke, but before they could get out the fumes were so dense that they were unable to find their way to the fire extinguishers and were compelled to flee for their lives.

ELKS BURY BODY OF THEIST

PENSACOLA, Fla., July 18.—Discovery that an unidentified man whose body was about to be buried in the Memphis, Tenn., potter's field had been a member of the order of Elks led to an investigation.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 19, 1911.

DR. WILEY.

IT APPEARS that Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, head of the bureau of chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, has no intention of taking advantage of the kind suggestion of the committee on personnel of the Department that he "be permitted to resign." I likewise it appears quite unlikely that President Taft will take the position that the "good of the service" demands the dismissal of the pure food expert. All of which is a source of general public satisfaction.

Were there any real charge against Dr. Wiley the case would be different, but if those who are seeking to get him out of the Government employ had sought a flimsy pretext to discredit him they could not have improved on the indictment that he paid an expert at a higher per diem rate for actual service performed than, computing the salary maximum on a day labor basis, the law allows. Attorney General Wickensham figured it out and put his official seal of approval on the recommendation of the personnel board, so it must be that, technically, Dr. Wiley has overstepped the bounds of the law.

That is not a practice to be encouraged on the part of public officials, nevertheless there are occasions when it has plenty of justification. Laws are supposed to be made in the interest of the public, and public officials are supposed to administer them similarly; and when it comes to sticking to the strict letter of the law to the injury of the people or stretching a point in order to give them the protection or benefit which the law was designed to give, the really valuable public servant is the man who places the public welfare first. Mr. Ballinger was a stickler for strict compliance with the law, and what might have been the present status of the public domain had the Interior Department been administered by Ballinger the last seven or eight years is a subject too painful to contemplate.

Dr. Wiley's "crime" is simply that of having been zealous in his administration of the pure food law. To get results he had to have expert assistance; to get such service he had to pay a little more perhaps than the law permitted. If proper provision were made for making the pure food law effective there would have been no such necessity, but this was only one of the many handicaps which Dr. Wiley has been under ever since he took office and no unprejudiced person will deny that he has accomplished results in the face of difficulties that would have caused a less earnest or energetic man to have long since thrown up his hands in disgust.

The protests that have poured in upon President Taft in the last few days furnish unmistakable evidence that the people appreciate Dr. Wiley's work and have confidence in him; and while the President may find it necessary gently to admonish the pure food expert to be careful in the future, the case does not demand his resignation or warrant his dismissal. On the contrary, the facts that have come to light rather enhance Dr. Wiley's standing as a sincere, aggressive public servant. What they emphasize particularly is the need of more adequate provision for the work in his charge. The pure food law has been shown to have serious defects, and Congress has been urged by President Taft himself to amend it. Until this is done the criticism that is now directed toward Dr. Wiley should fall upon Congress.

No matter what disposition President Taft makes of the Wiley charges the House committee on expenditures in the Department of Agriculture promises to sift the case to the bottom, and the work will be well worth while if it results in disclosing the interests that are trying so hard to get Dr. Wiley out of the service. The relentless and rancor with which the "dope" manufacturers have fought him is a fair measure of his value as a guardian of the public health.

There need not be serious apprehension regarding the danger of cholera getting a foothold in this country, although sporadic cases are likely to occur as a result of the infection carried to New York by vessels from Italy. Similar situations have been successfully met at various American ports and, speaking generally, sanitary conditions in this country are such that with proper measures by health authorities the disease can easily be isolated and stamped out.

TO PROTECT INVESTORS.

THE entire state will stand back of the Denver Clearing House Association and the State Land Board in their efforts to put an end to wildcat irrigation projects in Colorado. Committees have been appointed by both association and board to co-operate in the formation of some plan that will include a provision for official approval of irrigation projects.

The growing importance of irrigation in this state and the increasing appreciation of its value on the part of the public demand that some method be found of protecting the investor in Colorado real estate and at the same time prevent irrigated land from following the traditional engraved mining stock as a means of livelihood for the smooth-talking Wallingford cult.

The State of Colorado and the mining industry have been discredited by few things as they have by the floating of fake mining stock in all parts of the country. So widespread have been the activities of these "promoters" and so numerous their victims that in the minds of many people mining stock has become synonymous with gold brick. That this condition can have had no favorable or profitable reaction on the welfare of legitimate mining enterprises is patent, as is also the fact that it has not served to increase the investments in Colorado mining properties, even though the industry in this state has long since been put upon a sound business basis.

Before it is too late, it rests with the state to forestall any such misconception as to the value of its irrigated lands. The future of Colorado is so dependent upon the development of its agricultural resources that it is only a plain business proposition for the state to provide at least a semi-official guarantee for its greatest asset.

Ten years ago Hoke Smith's star seemed to be waning. Now he is a United States Senator. Some people can "come back" after all.

OPEN PARLIAMENT

THE PROPOSED BRIDGE AT ROSWELL.
To the Editor of The Gazette
You are no doubt tired of the controversy over the bridge question in Roswell, but we beg your indulgence once more. In your Open Parliament of July 17, there appeared an article on the bridge question, which, for flagrant misrepresentation, is the limit. It speaks of a called meeting of the Rock Island Improvement society, which a certain expert engineer (his name is not given), employed by citizens (whose names it doesn't mention), having maps, surveys, charts, etc. of Second and Fourth streets. They claim his figures show that it will cost $1,500 more to build the bridge at Fourth street than at Second. Further, they say this report was unanimously adopted.

Now the truth is that there were only 15 votes cast on the motion—10 for and five against it. And again the facts in regard to the cost of the bridge at Fourth street are just the reverse of their statement. The county commissioners will show the committee the figures of unrefined, unbiased and competent engineers, proving that it is cheaper to build and maintain the road and bridge at Fourth than at Second street. Their engineer would naturally make his figures favorable to his employers, who are determined to have the bridge at Second street or not have it at all.

They are greatly interested in the taxpayers saying what should be done with their money, but we wonder how much tax the three gentlemen who signed that article have paid in this county. The undersigned, some of whom have paid taxes for more than 30 years in this county, feel that we are just as much interested in the economical use of county funds as the comparative newcomers. They even insinuate in their letter that we have used money to influence the commissioners to locate said bridge on Fourth street. We here and now demand of them their proofs of such charges. It's a case of either show up or shut up. Gentlemen, not 1 cent has been given by anyone to influence the commissioners to locate the bridge at Fourth street, while they have hired an engineer to make a report favoring Second street. So if anyone has exerted undue influence to locate the bridge it is one of the men favorable to the Second street location.

And as to the wishes of the people in this matter, these gentlemen know that the people of Roswell in mass meeting spoke with no uncertain mind in favor of the Fourth street proposition. Fourth street is the best place for the following reasons. It is cheaper, the water runs at right angles with the street, where at Second street it does not; A 70-foot bridge at Fourth street will suffice, while at Second it will take one much longer, or an open approach, which amounts to the same thing; the fill will not require riprapping, but at Second street it will; a good undercrossing can be made at Fourth street, while at Second this is impossible.

FROM OTHER PENS

OH! HAPPY DAYS!
From the Columbus Dispatch.
Remember that time when you walked a mile and a half in a temperature that was 18 degrees below zero, and icicles formed on your mustache, and a fellow told you just as you reached the office doors that your ears were frozen and you had better not hit them or you would knock them off? Remember how you put snow on them till they thawed out and then how the ears swelled and were sore and peeled off, and you had to lie square on your back all the time for the pain, and the wind howled and the mercury went down, and you almost set fire to the house trying to keep warm? Ah, "them was the happy days."

THE COLONEL UNJUSTLY BLAMED.

From Harper's Weekly.
We regret to notice that a heated difference has transpired between two military gentlemen—General Harrison Gray Otis of Los Angeles and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt of Glen Cove and Fourth avenue. The difference is very hot on one side at least. Colonel Roosevelt wrote a piece for the Outlook, in which he said that "if the explosion (in General Otis' newspaper building) was not an accident, but the deliberate act of any man or men, it was an outrage of dastardly iniquity," etc. etc. Strange to say, General Otis found in this passage—the "if" and words following—a lending of the weight of his influence to the unfounded proposition that the Times might not have been dynamited at all, but was possibly blown up by gas." So he sails into the colonel hot and heavy, and the colonel comes back at him in the Outlook of June 17, and the general, in a piece that hurried east by telegraph, lets him have back about all that language can do.

Too bad, too bad! General Otis' judgment must be aberrated by the heat of the battles he has been in so long. The colonel expressed himself naturally and properly in the "if the explosion" passage, the weight of his influence lending neither to nor from the accused dynamiter. No just complaint lies against him on that score. It is for a jury to decide how the Times building was blown up, and, with a trial pending, a public expression of conviction on that point from the colonel's widely advertised pen would have been very unsuitable indeed.

General Otis ought to take something for his nerves. If those accused persons blew up his building, we would like to see some of them hanged; and if he rages so in his paper it will be apt to spoil the trial.

WHAT IS DOING IN PORTUGAL?

From the Washington Star.
Some tall lying is being done somewhere in Europe about the situation in Portugal. If it is true that there has been a fight between insurgent seamen and loyal troops in the streets of Lisbon, the government is taking big chances in sending forth the specific denial that was dispatched yesterday from the Portuguese capital. If on the other hand, it is untrue and the government's denial is correct, somebody is busily engaged in trying to create the impression that the new republic is in serious difficulties, for what purpose must be left to the imagination.

A censorship such as that which, it is understood, the Lisbon government has maintained, is late over all news matters is never fully effective in suppressing the truth. The mere institution of means of news repression stimulates the activity of the news getters and the distributors. Only by preventing ingress and egress altogether by maintaining armed guards in a complete cordon about the country can the circulation of news be checked. The chances are infinitely against the government in such an enterprise, and it is folly to undertake to prevent the world from knowing what is happening. Of the maintenance of a censorship in Portugal there appears to be no doubt and this fact alone suggests that either something is happening there out of the usual course or that trouble is feared.

SEVEN NEW PRISONERS

In her wigwam, neat and small, pretty Little Yellow Shawl sat a-dreaming of her lover, who had gone away to school—brave and stalwart Twisted Nose, son of Ringbones-on-his-Toes, who could whip his weight in bobcats, who could ride a bucking mule (Chorus). Oh, the noble Twisted Nose was a terror to his foes, tall the nation came and told him that an Injun was a fool, if he was content to fight, he should learn to read and write, so the maiden's stalwart lover left her side and went to school. Now she hears her lover's call! "Oh, my darling Yellow Shawl, let me take you to my bosom, for you are my one best bet!" But she shuddered and she sighed "Push yourself away," she cried, for he wore a crimson necktie and he smoked a cigarette. "You loved when bold and rude, but the time has passed, and now you are a noisy lemon trousers and your dinky rah-rah lid! Never more shall Yellow Shawl come to greet you at your call, she will never be your honey or your little katydid!" (Chorus). Oh, the noble Twisted Nose went and pawned his rah-rah clothes, and he wore a rusty blanket and a streak of purple paint, and to Little Yellow Shawl he'll be married in the fall, and he be happy ever after in his wigwam queer and quaint. Alarums and excursions.

THE CHITTY

BY RUTH CAMERON
She is bright. She is pretty. She is an eminently likeable person in many ways, BUT she has one decided "out."

I think it wins her as many enemies as her good qualities bring her friends. And the "out" is that she is always saying flat things.

Of course you know what I mean by that. For instance, we are discussing the difficulty of getting a seat on the trolley cars at rush hours, and she says, "Somehow I always seem to have a seat given me. I don't know why it is. I hope I don't look so old as all that." She attempts to appear most puzzled and ingenious as she says it. The attempt is a complete failure. We all know she thinks the reason is quite obvious.

Again she professes herself most indignant because "people are always staring at me. I think it's perfectly horrid."

Perhaps we foolishly assure her that she can't blame them, and thereby give her an incentive to say more flat things.

Perhaps we are sensible enough to maintain silence. In either case we are inwardly registering a doubt as to the sincerity of her indignation.

I met a most virulent example of this type of girl at an afternoon tea the other day. She was a blonde and the tea was given in her honor.

Twice during the afternoon her husband called her up on the telephone. The instrument was in the hall, and by lowering her voice she could have talked without being heard. But she was evidently the last thing that she desired, for, instead of lowering her voice, she raised it, and fragments like this floated in to us: "Be patient, dear, only one hour longer." "Yes, dear, if you can't wait for me to come home you may come for me." "Well, you can look at my picture, then, darling."

The second time she came away from the phone she announced with a sweet simper, "Isn't he funny? He says he can't wait to see me. He says he's hungry."

Did you ever eat anything so cloysingly sweet that the sweetness choked you all up all of a sudden? Well, that's the way my mind felt after that dose. Of course everybody says flat things once in a while. But wise people try to make that once-in-a-while synonymous with seldom or hardly ever.

Also, of course it's hard to tell when you are saying them. But here's a pretty good way to tell. Whenever you catch yourself planning to say something simply because you think it will impress people with your beauty or popularity or some other desirable quality, don't say it. Ten to one they will see right through you and it will sound flat.

MOTORCYCLISTS EXCEED MANITOU SPEED LAWS

Speed-crazed motorcyclists are causing the police no end of trouble, especially on Manitou avenue. Starting early in the evening a number of riders come up the avenue from Colorado Springs at a much greater speed than the law allows, seemingly not caring for the danger attached. A short time ago a rider was fined in police court for this offense and the authorities are determined to put a stop to it.

LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN

NO. 1 MARIE ANTOINETTE

the amusements and frivolity of the palace

When Louis XVI succeeded to the throne of France, at the death of his grandfather, he was only 20 years of age. At the time he was considered an exemplary young man; that is, in comparison with the young men in his class were in those days. He commenced his reign with the sincere desire to ameliorate the condition of his suffering people. He was, however, unfortunate in his choice of ministers, and even more so on account of the extravagance of his wife, Marie Antoinette.

The people began to murmur against "the Austrian," as she was called, being a daughter of Francis I and Marie Theresa. She paid no heed. Carlyle pictures her thus in his "French Revolution." "Meanwhile the fair young queen, in her halls of state, walks like a goddess of beauty, the tyrosine of all eyes, as yet mingled not with affairs; heads not the future; least of all, dreads it."

Weber and Campan have pictured her. "There within the royal tapestries, in bright boudoir baths, peignoirs and the Grand and Little Toilet, with a whole brilliant world waiting obsequious on her glance; fair young daughter of Time, what things have Time in store for thee! Like earth's brightest, Appearance she gracefully, environed with the grandeur of Earth, a reality, and yet a magic vision, for, behold shall not utter Darkness swallow it!"

The extravagant French queen was born at Vienna, on November 2, 1755. On May 16, 1770, at Versailles, when the archduchess of Austria was married in the Dauphin, she was only 15 years of age. When the nuptials were celebrated in Paris by a fireworks display, 1,200 men, women and children were either slain or wounded in a massacre by assassins believed to have been paid by parties opposed to the alliance.

Marie Antoinette wept when she learned the extent of the calamity; the Parisians shrugged their shoulders and contented themselves with saying that a reign thus inauspiciously begun could not be happily consummated.

While the Dauphin was grave, retiring and contemplative, Marie was fond of gaiety, of the pleasures derived from intimacy and social intercourse, of music and dancing. She drew him gently from his solitude into

"The manners of the queen," says Alison, "accelerated the revolution." She discharged with exemplary fidelity every duty to her husband and her children and bore a reverse of fortune, unparalleled even in that age of calamity, with a heroism that never was surpassed."

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 18.—A sudden awakening from the extreme dullness of the stock market of the last week occurred in the last hour of trading today. In contrast with the recent inactivity, the market was excited. Union Pacific was the center of the bull demonstration, advancing nearly 3 points. Interborough Metropolitan preferred improved nearly 4 points, common 1 1/2, and Manhattan Elevated, 1 1/2. Gains of 1 to 3 points were quite general throughout the remainder of the day. The excited dealings which accompanied the slump in the cotton market, and lower quotations for grain, were followed by a moderate advance in stocks. The fertilizer shares, which are expected to receive special benefits from a large cotton crop, developed marked strength. Canadian Pacific continued its record-breaking rise, advancing 3 points, to 24 1/2. Settlement of the New York subway problem is expected to be of benefit to the market by removing an uncertain factor of long standing.

United States Steel and Amalgamated Copper advanced more vigorously than either of these shares has done in several days. The copper market remaining dull, with further price concessions reported. Another reduction of domestic steel is expected this month by the producers. The United States Steel corporation continues to increase its mill operations, and shipments at present are said to be running larger than at any other time since the first of the year. It was currently reported that heaviness in New York 4 1/2 per cent bonds resulted from enforced liquidation on the part of a speculator who had subscribed for a large amount of these bonds and had experienced some difficulty in meeting his obligations. The general bond market was steady. Total sales, $1,200,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on call.

SUES FOR DIVORCE AND HAS HUSBAND ARRESTED

Alleging that she had been assaulted by her husband, Frank Sandberg, Mrs. Anna Sophia Sandberg caused him to be arrested yesterday and placed in the county jail. Mrs. Sandberg has also filed a suit for divorce in the district court, alleging that he has mistreated her and that he is a man of "violent temper and coarse and brutal habits." In a supplemental complaint the woman claims that as soon as Sandberg learned of the proposed divorce he sold a number of head of cattle and horses at a price far below their value. She believes, according to her complaint, that he may try to leave the state pending the divorce.

A good lunch

means a successful picnic. If the planning, ordering and preparing the lunch falls on one of the party it means a day of drudgery for that person.

How much easier and how much more satisfactory it is to have Burgess prepare the lunch. The delicatessen and bakery departments supply at short notice every delicacy for a delicious lunch.

Your picnic may be planned on the spur of the moment, a delightful lunch prepared by Burgess and you may be on your way in an hour's time.

Delicious sandwiches cut from bread made especially for the purpose. Tempting, wholesome meats, delicious salads, pickles in large variety, jams, cakes, pies and candy and everything as well cooked and daintily prepared as you would do it in your own home.

It's cheaper to get your lunches here too.

The entire stock of Dry Goods, Women's and Children's Ready-to-Wear Apparel, China, Glassware and House Furnishings is included in the most far-reaching Cut Price Sale this section of Colorado has ever known. The conditions and circumstances making this sale absolutely imperative are of such importance, that only the most drastic procedure will suffice to obtain the desired results.

35c TO 65c ON THE DOLLAR IS A FAIR AVERAGE OF THE PRICES THAT PREVAIL THROUGHOUT THE STORE.
$20,000.00 worth of this magnificent stock is to be turned into cash during the Eleven Days allotted to the sale. Thousands of dollars worth of seasonable and wantable merchandise at wholesale prices and less, a tempting sacrifice of profits and even actual costs. The memory of this wonderful saving chance will linger long in your mind, an event distinctly out-of-the-ordinary one of those few-and-far-between occasions that happen but few times in the lifetime of a person.

NOTE MR. J. C. PIRATH OF CHICAGO, ILL., A SPECIAL SALE CONDUCTOR, HAS BEEN ENGAGED WITH SPECIFIC INSTRUCTION TO REALIZE THE DESIRED AMOUNT REGARDLESS OF THE LOSS IT ENTAILS TO DO SO.

NOW THE "TANGO" PICKPOCKET

From the Philadelphia Ledger
PARIS—A new type of petty criminal has recently been classified by the police. They give him the name of tango pickpocket.

The present vogue of complicated dances such as the tango, furiana and maxine, has given the entree to Paris hallways to many persons of unknown antecedents whose sole recommendation is that they are exceptionally good dancers. Thus an attractive young woman who for some weeks frequented the exclusive society of a dancing club where she was believed to be a Russian princess, turned out to be a lady's maid while a number of excellent ballet dancers and circus performers playing the roles of Argentine millionaires have enjoyed unlimited hospitality in some of the best social circles on the strength of their skill in the tango.

The police have now discovered that many of these pseudo-aristocrats have been taking full advantage of the complicated latitudes which the tango and its kindred dances involve to pickpocket and purloin jewelry. The number of reports which have reached the police of pearl necklaces and diamond ornaments which have been lost at dances this year is above the average.
The authorities believe that the reason is that while the fair dancers' attention was concentrated upon the proper placing of her feet in the in-

FRENCH CAVALEY WILL BE EQUIPPED WITH HORSES, AS SHOWN BY TEST

PARIS, April 18.—The French government has decided to equip its cavalry with horses, as shown by a test made at Vincennes, near Paris, on April 17.

By PHILIP EVERETT.

PARIS, April 18.—It is a fact that the French government has decided to equip its cavalry with horses, as shown by a test made at Vincennes, near Paris, on April 17. The test was made by the French government, and it was a success.

In other ways the conditions were not exactly those of war. It must also be remembered that the horses which arrived at Vincennes were only a proportion of those that had not yet been sent to the front. BOMB FACTORY IS FOUND IN CALCUTTA

CALCUTTA, April 18.—A complete plant for the making of bombs has been found here and the police believe they have discovered a band of Hindus organized for the wholesale murder of white persons. Among the papers found in the tenacious of the bomb was a Hindustani pamphlet dealing with the use of poison for political purposes. It is known as 'The Liberty Leaflet' and with it was a letter bearing the monogram of the University of California. The pamphlet advocates a general massacre of Europeans, particularly Englishmen. Two arrests have been made.

The New Way of Removing Superfluous Hair And Other Beauty Secrets

ALL OUT—I do not wonder that you are disgusted with the hair tonics commonly sold. Did it ever occur to you that you need a real hair grower instead of a hair tonic? Here is a formula which has a wonderful effect upon the cell-growth of hair and results can be quickly seen in the sprouting of new hairs. In the vigorous growth and lengthening of hair, and in its added lustre and fluffiness. Here is the formula: To half a pint of alcohol add half a pint of water for each you may use a full pint of bay rum if you wish and to this add one ounce of benzoin which will cost no more than fifty cents at the drug store.

spoonfuls of glycerine with half a pint of hot water and while stirring add one ounce of zinc oxide, which costs no more than fifty cents at the drug store.

MISS GENTLE O. M.—You say you are 25 and look like 35. If you will try this wrinkle formula you will soon say you will look like 20, and this is no exaggeration. Your actual results will prove it. If you will make up your mind to use this formula, liberally, every day, and use no other so-called wrinkle cream. Add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and two ounces of alcohol to a half a pint of hot water. Keep stirring until they form a milky cream. This is so economical that it can be used generously and will hasten the growth of hair and skin. The epidermis will cost no more than fifty cents at the drug store. You will find this will work in an astounding manner.

DISGUSTED Blackheads can be positively removed in a few minutes if you will sprinkle a little borax on a hot, wet sponge and rub this on the blackheads. The borax will cost no more than fifty cents at the drug store. You will find this will work in an astounding manner.

MISS ALFRED H. PUMPER can be very quickly removed by taking one or two teaspoonfuls of sugar, one ounce of arsenic and a pint of water. Get the arsenic at the drug store, by the ounce in the original package.

The Home Beauty Parlor

Marguerite: You should make up and use this hair tonic and you will have no further trouble with your hair. It is a hair tonic and will give you a new growth of hair. Put 1 or 2 drops in each crease a day for a while and the hair will grow. It will give almost instant relief to tired, aching eye muscles and it is a remedy for all eye troubles. It is a hair tonic and will give you a new growth of hair.

City Girl: Yes, some people have a tendency to get the scalp of the oil, and frequently causing a mild form of dandruff. Get from your drugist a small original package of cantharol and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, then pour this mixture on the head slowly and rub well. The thick, cleansing lather will dissolve all dandruff and excess oil and greatly invigorate the scalp and hair roots. Rinsing leaves the scalp impervious to dirt, while the hair dries naturally and is greatly enriched in color and brilliancy. Cantharol shampoos, if used regularly, will correct scalp troubles and induce the hair to grow thick and beautiful.

Priscilla: The old fashioned, hard-to-use hair tonic is Nature's best helper, and a course of treatment of this famous blood purifier and tissue-builder restores strength and vitality to the weak, worn body. It is easily and cheaply made at home—just dissolve 1 teaspoonful of sugar and 1 ounce of glycerine in 1 pint of alcohol (not whisky) then add hot water to make a full quart. This tonic restores lost appetite, builds up the system, gives the skin a clear, healthy glow and guards against dandruff.

Mrs. A. I. M. To retain the velvet smoothness and healthy tint of your complexion, apply daily a spraysm lotion. Use by dissolving 4 ounces spraysm in 1 pint witch hazel or hot water to which add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. It is the perfect complexion and will make the skin as soft and clear as a baby's. The beauty skin clear and glowing.

Mrs. L. E. Electric scalp massages will do as much for your scalp as will a plain quinine hair tonic, made by adding 1 ounce quinine to 1 pint alcohol, in which is then poured 1 pint water. Apply this tonic to the scalp and you will see the hair grow and you will be surprised how quickly the dry scalp condition will disappear. Then, too, this treatment will restore the strength of the hair and its natural growth. I unhesitatingly recommend this quinine tonic for dandruff, faded, streaky or gray hair, because of the great good it has done for others.

Mrs. de L. If you are getting too fat, mix together 4 ounces paraffin and 1 pint cold water. Dissolve 1 ounce asphaltum and 1 ounce turpentine in the paraffin. Let stand one day then at night apply generously to skin, covering the wrinkles. This protects the surface and stimulates the blood vessels just beneath the skin and so nourishes the starved tissues underneath the surface. They gradually assume their proper shape then the wrinkles or lines will have vanished. As a skin cleanser and rejuvenator of the complexion the all-moocin cream jelly is not equalled. It cleanses, blackheads, skin roughness and restores the skin to its natural softness. Betty Dean's Beauty Book (Adv.)

MRS. POTTER PALMER
The hue and cry that has been raised against Mrs. Potter Palmer by the recent revelation that the funds for a women's and children's memorial amounting to something like $67,000, that were raised by the women's committee at the Chicago World's fair, have been allowed to remain idle for more than 20 years, has stirred the ire of Mrs. Palmer. As chairman of the board of lady managers of the Columbian exposition she has had control of the money. She has just made public a statement in which she explains that the money has been kept intact purposely until the supreme court should decide whether a building could be erected in Grant park and thus augment the fund by $200,000, left for the purpose by the late Potter Palmer in his will.

OLD IRONSIDES

Ave. tear her tattered ensign down
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has glanced to see
That banner in the sky.
That banner in the sky
And burst the cannon's shout
The meteor of the ocean all Shall sweep the clouds no more
Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,
Where knelt the vanquished foe,
When winds were hurrying o'er the Flood.
And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread
Or know the conquered knee.
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
The eagle of the sea.
Oh, better that her shattered hulk
Should sink beneath the wave,
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
And there should be her grave,
Nail to the mast her holy flag,
Revered in every breast that sails
And give her to the god of storms,
The lightning and the gale.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With The Othine Prescription

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement. Some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine. It is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee. Adv.

of the cutaway held together by a single button and opening over a waist of white crepe. This has a novel draping blouse effect in the back. The skirt falls in easy, flowing lines and has the new rather full back. It is now showing. A bell-shaped overskirt ends slightly above the knees. This opens in a V-shaped slit in the front and reaches downward toward the back, carrying out the original scheme of the cutaway coat. The bodice is of white crepe and is shaped like a half-moon from which a veil of white cotton cloth is draped and fastened. A simple muff of white crepe and white cloth is designed to go with the costume, and on it is placed a bunch of white violets. Colonial shoes of white suede and perfectly plain white socks complete the beautiful ensemble and a brooch of white coral, the only jewelry save dull jet permissible to mourning shows at the neck of the white crepe waist.

For indoor wear a charming morning frock is created in black and white. It is built in exaggerated Empire style with a very deep grade of white tulle gorgette crepe knotted at the back. White crepe de chine is employed with a subtle effect for the cowlike kerchief collar and rolling cuffs.

A mourning dinner gown also shows an artistic combination of black and white. The body of the gown is of

This sleeve I found had similar lines and conveyed the same bouffant effect as the puffed drapery on the skirt. They reach only to the elbow and are finished with a deep full of tulle. A smart colored note is given to the gown by a touch of old blue ribbon on the waist and two small bunches of flowers of a bright hue. A full ruche of white tulle adds the finishing touch to the back of the neck.

For the second model (Fig. 2) I have employed black tulle as the medium. The silk is gathered very fully on the hips, this naturally bunches out at the back, the ample material, which is then caught and tied rather closely to the figure with a blue ribbon in a pretty bow. The catching up of the drapery makes a double pander at the back, while at the front only the effect of one pander is shown. A fine green tulle is extended down the front of the bodice and a touch of the blue is introduced. The sleeves are of white crepe edged with lace. A large plain black bow is worn on the corsage at the back of the neck. The hat worn with this gown is a black one of the same style of the style of the moment. Our changes are most eccentric or else white crepe meter, and the slight décolletage is outlined with a graduated ruffe of lusterless black tulle whose narrow lines meet at the broad air die, also of tulle, where they are closed with a single large white rose. The skirt of the white crepe meter is gathered with considerable fullness into the waist, then hangs limply to the feet, spreading out into a clover leaf train. A short tulle edged with a graduated ruffe of the black tulle, similar to that on the waist, is superimposed on the skirt proper. A long chain of various sized dull jet beads is hung around the waist and swings in knotted intervals to below the knees, while touches of airy white tulle embellish the décolletage and also form the rippling sleeves, which cascade to shortly above the elbow.

A Supremely Smart Gown.

In the illustration designated Fig. 1 is shown one of my latest gowns. Its distinctive feature is the bustle. In the costume under discussion the 1830 bustle is developed in a new effect with a style and grace that the other kind "improver" lacked. The gown is made in black tulle. The bodice, which is very tight at the an- kles, is arranged on an extended hip. The bustle is arranged to convey a very full effect. The trend of drapery for a long time has been pointing to the accept- ance of bustles, and in this, my latest creation, the mode is strongly ex- emplified. The silhouette, being as broad at the hips and as narrow as possible at the ankles, it is essential to be slim in order to wear this model with success. A short, stout woman would look ungainly in such a gown. It looks charming and graceful on the right figure and quite ridiculous on the other sort, and the difficulty is to know your kind sufficiently not to let your up skirt, which is very tight at the an- kles, be arranged on an extended hip. The bustle is arranged to convey a very full effect. The trend of drapery for a long time has been pointing to the accept- ance of bustles, and in this, my latest creation, the mode is strongly ex- emplified. The silhouette, being as broad designed on the most picturesque lines. There is no medium. The one here depicted has a comparatively plain line, yet the extremely high crown and the sharply turned brim together with the old regal looking plume stamps it as an ultra smart model. It is made of dull black corded silk and the plume also is in black. As tailored suits are of the greatest interest at this date in the calendar I am showing in Fig. 3 a tiny little model made up in plain and plain material. The contrasting coat and skirt is at its height of popularity. Although this mode was worn last season, it shows no sign of abating. But in last season's models, however, the relations between the two garments was very distant, but this year's styles have the plain fabric introduced on the skirt in some way or other. The suit drawn shows strongly the prevailing mode at the moment. The skirt is of black and white shepherd's plaid material and the coat and under are of black char- muse. A distinctive feature is the novel way in which the unmistakably modern theme is arranged on the coat. The narrow roll over collar and full are in the white batiste.

Following the vogue for plain serge trimmed with figured silks, one of my smartest models is in a fine dark blue serge with a drapery of striped Italian silk in the most vivid coloring. The silk is drawn tightly around the figure and then held up into a large loop and ends at the back. The rich looking drapery is so draped that the wide black tulle stripe in the silk terminates each end. Another striped silk, but in rather faded tones, in which pink predominates, is the medium employed in the last sketch shown of Fig. 4. This has a rather tight skirt with a draping going toward the back. The wide black stripe in the skirt shows the connection between the two garments, as black tulle, lined with a faded pink, is used for the round little bodice, which is trimmed with bands of the same figured silk and embroidered buttons in pink and black. The white organdy chemise and piers are finished with a blue lace border. The hat is a simple crepe straw, has the brim pulled in at the center of the crown, and is caught with a huge bow of tulle.

The little tailored hat illustrated is one I would recommend for shopping and for the early morning construction. It is in a dark green straw, with a simple band of the same colored silk around the crown, and two extremely square soft quills also in green. As with all the others, they are placed full in the front at the most extreme angles, giving it a decided effect.

Seasonable Mourning Frocks. Tons of facile silk. This silk also forms an effective walking costume. Very severe in type, it is created from black crepe perline. The narrow skirt built on an absolutely straight line, has an equally close fitting tunic with that slope toward the back known as the dove-tail. This same slope is followed to the most elegant for carriage wear in the lines of the glorified Eden jacket, whose sole ornamentations are but a few of facile silk. This silk also forms a more elaborate toilette that seems dovetailed. Developed in for white Egyptian crepe whose sole ornamentations are but a few of facile silk. 535 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

It is a season when fashion has turned as polygamous as any Mormon and has united in a single costume the pet innovations of various courtesies. We are at least bewildered if not at times aesthetically shocked to see Jenny's bustle living in amity with Cherul's tied tunic and Premet's bell formed overskirt coquetting so brazenly on the same model with X-rayable bolero introduced by scoll.

Direct along seems to continue conservative in the matter of lines and remains the advocate for the slight undraped skirt, outlining rather than opposing the figure. The reason for this determination not to be perilled on the waves and billows of fashions of his contemporaries is the love of the "human form divine" still remains the chief consideration of this individualist, and he cannot forget that not long since he was as good as a sculptor as he is now recognized as a couturier.

In this side of the water, however, I find that the American woman at large apt to be more conservative in her tastes, and bizarre combinations of color and fabric do not appeal to her they do to her French sister. One reason for this is probably that must in most instances considerability as well as allurement in her ments. For instance, the smart Vienna lady goes out afoot. Her tunic is designed for carriage or and would therefore be absurd in general adoption in a country where the majority walk, motor or use public conveyances, in which diaphanous beauty of a French section would become nil. So in signing for the American woman I find that I have struck a happy note creating for her costumes as exactly perfect in each detail as those originated abroad and yet having the added quality of meeting her own particular national requirements.

Mourning in Different Nations.

For many years the Anglo-Saxon race forbade any apparel but the most lusterless black for the first year of mourning, but since the precedent of wearing white was established, about a year ago, by one of the most prominent women in America convention and fashion now unite in approval of white mourning, though black is not tabooed. It is yours, therefore, to decide whether your garments shall symbolize "the death of the body or the life of the soul," as one writer so aptly puts it.

Going back into history, however, we find that the oldest nations of whose customs we have any authentic record, namely the Egyptians, wore yellow, when the spirit of death was abroad, to indicate the fading of mortal life, as the green leaf seems to yellow with decay. The Ethiopians were told, wore gray to typify "the color of the clay from which the body was born and to which it was returned." The medieval Italians adopted scarlet to express the glorious release of the unbound soul; many of the Asiatic peoples affected sky blue, indicating that the spirit had but ascended into the ether above, while the royal Stuarts established purple as their regal badge of mourning.

With the adoption of white for mourning by many of the most conventionally minded people there has also come into use a much greater variety of materials for costumes than established precedent hitherto allowed. Ornateness of design or construction is still avoided, but we are permitted a much greater latitude in the matter of fabric and trimming. All the soft dull materials, such as crepe de Chine, chiffon cloth, crepe Imperial, Henrietta, challis and other lusterless wool finished materials may be correctly employed, but satins and any fabric with a sheen are not au fait. Lace is rarely used for a trimming, but hand embroideries in sedate, stiff designs, and hemstitchings galore are plentifully employed for decorative purposes.

of the cutaway—held together by a single button and opening over a waist of white crepe—has a novel drooping basque effect in the back. The skirt falls in easy, flowing lines and has the new rather full back I am now showing. A bell shaped overskirt ends slightly above the knees. This opens in a V shaped slit in the front and inclines downward toward the back, carrying out the original scheme of the cutaway coat. The bonnet is of white crepe and is shaped like a half melon, from which a veil of white chiffon cloth is draped in fashion. A spring muff of white crepe and white chiffon cloth is designed to go with the costume, and on it is planned a bunch of white violets. Colonial shoes of white suede and perfectly plain white silk hose complete the beautiful ensemble, and a brooch of white coral—the only jewelry save dull jet permissible to mourning—shows at the neck of the white crepe waist.

For indoor wear a charming morning frock is created in black nun's veiling. It is built in exaggerated Empire style with a very deep girde of white Georgette crepe knotted at the back. White crepe de laie is employed with admirable effect for the cowboy kerchief collar and rolling cuffs.

A mourning dinner gown also shows an artistic combination of black and white. The body of the gown is of

This sleeve I found had a deep blue and conveyed the same bouffant effect as the puffed drapery on the skirt. They reach only to the elbow and are finished with a deep frill of tulle. A smart colored note is given to the gown by a touch of old blue ribbon on the waist and two small bunches of flowers of a bright hue. A full ruche of white tulle adds the finishing touch to the back of the neck.

For the second model (Fig. 2) I have employed black taffeta as the medium. The silk is gathered very fully on the hips, this naturally bunches out at the back, the ample material, which is then caught and tied rather closely to the figure with a blue ribbon in a pretty bright shade. The catching up of the drapery makes a double pannier at the back while at the front only the effect of one pannier is shown. A fine cream lace is cascaded down the front of the corsage and a touch of the blue is introduced. The sleeves are of white chiffon edged with lace. A large plain jet buckle is worn on the corsage at the back of the neck. The hat worn with this gown gives a curious instance of the style of the moment. Our chapeaux are most eccentric or else white crepe meter, and the slight décolletage is outlined with a graduated ruffle of lusterless black taffeta whose narrowed lines meet at the broad girde, also of taffeta, where they are edged with a single large white rose. The skirt of the white crepe meter is gathered with considerable fullness into the waist, then hangs limply to the feet, spreading out into a clover leaf train. A short tunic edged with a graduated ruffle of the black taffeta, similar to that on the waist, is superimposed on the skirt proper. A long chain of various sized dull jet beads is hung around the waist and swings in knotted intervals to below the knees, while touches of airy white tulle embellish the décolletage and also form the rippling sleeves, which cascade to shortly above the elbow.

A Supremely Smart Crown.
In the illustration designated Fig. 1 is shown one of my latest gowns. Its distinctive feature is the bustle. In the costume under discussion the 1830 bustle is developed in a new effect with a style and grace that the original "improver" lacked. The gown is made in black taffeta moire. The skirt, which is very tight at the ankles, is arranged on an extended hip yoke, and the bunched drapery on the hips is arranged to convey a very full effect. The trend of drapery for a long time has been pointing to the acceptance of bustles, and in this, my latest creation, the mode is strongly exemplified. The silhouette, being as broad

at the hips and as narrow as possible at the ankles, it is essential to be slim in order to wear this model with success. A short, stout woman would look unattractively in such a gown. It looks charming and graceful on the right figure and quite ridiculous on the other sort, and the difficulty is to know your kind sufficiently and not let your appreciation of the charming and smart run away with your good judgment. Sleeves usually prove the crucial test of the best sartorialism, and one does well to watch closely the play the leading dressmakers make with every sleeve they attack. In this gown I am describing I have revived the old fashioned puff sleeve, the sleeve of 1833, designed on the most picturesque lines. There is no medium. The one here depicted has unequivocally plain lines, yet the exceptionally high crown and the sharply turned brim together with the still regal looking plume stamps it as an ultra smart model. It is made of dull black corded silk and the plume also is in black.

As tailored suits are of the greatest interest at this date in the calendar I am showing in Fig. 3 a trig little model made up in plaid and plain material. The contrasting coat and skirt is at its height of popularity. Although this mode was worn last season, it shows no sign of abating. But in last season's models, however, the relationship between the two garments was very distant, but this year's styles have the plain fabric introduced on the skirt in some way or other. The suit drawn shows strongly the prevailing mode at the moment. The skirt is of black and white shepherd's plaid material and the coat and tunic are of black charmeuse. A distinctive feature is the novel way in which the unmistakably godet flounce is arranged on the coat. The narrow roll over collar and frill are in fine white batiste.

Following the vogue for plain serges trimmed with figured silks, one of my smartest models is in a fine dark blue serge, with a drapery of striped Italian silk in the most vivid colorings. The silk is drawn tightly around the figure and bunched up into a huge loop and ends at the back. The rich looking fabric is so draped that the wide, black taffeta stripe in the silk terminates each end. Another striped silk, but in rather faded tones, in which pink predominates, is the medium employed in the last sketch shown (Fig. 4). This has a rather tight skirt with a draping going toward the back. The wide, black stripe in the skirt shows the connection between the two garments, as black taffeta, lined with a faded pink, is used for the novel little bolero, which is trimmed with bands of the same figured silk and enameled buttons in pink and black. The white organdie chemise and revers are finished with a fine handwork. The hat in sulphur colored straw has the brim rolled back to the center of the crown, where it is caught with a huge bow of taffeta.

The little tailored hat illustrated is one I would recommend for shopping and for the early morning constitutional. It is in a dark green straw, with a simple band of the same colored silk around the crown and two extremely smart soft quills, also in green. As will be noticed, they are placed full in the front at a most eccentric angle, giving to a hat a decided cachet.

Seasonable Mourning Frocks.

An effective walking costume, very severe in type, is evolved from black crepe poplin. The narrow skirt built on absolutely straight lines has an equally close fitting tunic with that slope toward the back known as the dovetail. This same slope is followed in the lines of the glorified Eton jacket, whose sole ornamentations are but tions of faille silk. This silk also forms the rolling Tuxedo collar and cuffs. With this costume I favor a turban of tawny straw laid in vertical pleats from which the double crepe veil hangs in simple folds.

A more elaborate toilette that seems to me most elegant for carriage wear is developed in two white Egyptian crepe. The jacket, which has the sloping lines

Large initials placed in words are particularly useful in spelling and since the words are fresh and the effect excellent, the use of initials in the words of towns worked in this way is very creditable. A few are as follows:

The words which I like are the summer holiday for many years. Christmas gifts are words. Turkish towns for friends. The initials above the border on the towns from the books is also an excellent thing. It is a pleasure in the heart and initials correspond in color.

The Most Destructive of All Crimes

European Cities Send Men to Jail When Their Property Is Destroyed by Fire Result Is Less Than One-Tenth American Loss

BY JOHN F. EAGAN.

If all the fire losses in the United States in the last twelve months could be placed side by side we would have an avenue of desolation extending from Indianapolis to Key West.

The annual loss in the United States is $225,000,000, yet we go on unconcerned just as though destruction was not sweeping through the land at the rate of more than $500 a minute. The biggest crime pulled off in America is the fire crime and it goes unpunished.

Put America side by side with the countries of Europe and we have to hide our faces with shame. In the city of Prague the firemen die in bed. It has been fifteen years since a fireman died while on duty in Prague. In America it is so common to hear of a fireman being killed at a fire that it does not call for any particular comment in the newspapers. Prague is a city of a quarter of a million people. The average loss there for the last three years is $20,000. The average American city of that population has a loss of $500,000 a year.

In Vienna there is no case known in more than a generation where a fire has extended beyond the building in which it originated. Boston, which is several times smaller than the capital of Austria, has an annual fire loss of $2,000,000. I am willing to bet that the American fire fighters are as heroic as the firemen in any city in Europe. I am a fireman myself and have been where men have gone to death undauntedly fighting to save property and lives. From seven years following Fire Chief Swingley and the captain of my company I know the stuff the American fireman is made of. The trouble is not with the men of America who fight the fires. It is with the men who allow the conditions that make fires.

The reason Vienna doesn't have fires is because there are laws against the law. Prague doesn't have fires because a prison cell is waiting for the man whose house catches fire and the fire spreads to another man's place. In this country if a man runs over another with an automobile the injured party brings suit, and has a good chance to recover damages. The man who drove the machine explains to the judge it was not his fault.

The street was wet and the machine skidded—the driver may explain.

You who have driven more slowly when the street was wet than the American judge will answer. In this country when a man leaves a hole in the street beside his property unguarded, any man passing by who falls in has a good chance for damages, but when a man allows a fire to start in his own place through carelessness and it spreads to another place we say nothing. The neighboring places are burned and suffer damage from the burning company. In Europe the neighbors who are burned out bring suit. The prosecuting attorney brings criminal proceedings if he finds carelessness to any extent.

KEEP HEAD TO FLOOR IF CAUGHT IN FIRE.

When a fire is started it is too late to talk about prevention. Then it is the duty of the fireman to get the people out and save the buildings. The duty of others is to render what assistance they can. When a fire starts the man who discovers it should give the alarm to the fire department as quickly as possible. Then he can do what he can to put out the fire until the firemen come. In a large city where there is a well organized fire department there is little the public can do to assist the firemen. Their biggest duty is to get out of the way after the firemen come. Only those who have business at the fire should try to get inside the fire lines.

For a person who wakes up in a hotel in the night when the cry of fire is in the air and who realizes he is in a burning building where he is about to be suffocated, the best thing he can do to save himself is to keep his head down near the floor and put a towel over his face. A wet towel keeps him refreshed and the water in the towel, while permitting the air to pass through, strains the particles in the smoke.

Panics destroy hundreds of lives needlessly. The death loss at the Iroquois Theater in Chicago was due to panic more than to the fire. The same was true at the Christmas Eve panic in Calumet, Mich. At the Iroquois the doors of the theater opened inward. Had the crowd waited a few seconds for the doors to be opened most of the crowd could have escaped. As it was all became terrified. They rushed for the exits. The crowd in front reached the doors but could not open them. They were held against the doors by the fighting, pushing crowd behind. Women were trampled under foot. They didn't have a chance to escape.

At Calumet, Mich., a hall was filled with women, men and children holding a benefit performance for the children of the striking laborers. Someone cried "fire." Instantly there was a rush for the doors. Men shouted excitedly in many languages. The door at the exit led to a stairs. Those first to reach the stairs raced down. The crowd behind pushed on. Those in the doorway were forced on the stairs before those ahead of them could get down the stairs. They were sent flying down. The stairway was filled with bodies and those underneath were crushed to death or injured.

The worst part of it all was that there was no fire.

When in a fire a man should keep his presence of mind. He should not give way to terror for then there is little hope for him unless some one comes to the rescue. A fireman can go into buildings where it would be death for a civilian to enter. The average man does not know what to do in a fire. The fireman has been trained to take care of himself.

BUCKLEY FIRE ESCAPES COST TRIANGLE LIVES.

The great loss of lives in the Triangle Waist Company fire in New York when the girls at work in the factory hurled themselves to death by jumping to the pavement was due to carelessness to a large extent. The fire escapes were locked. The Triangle factory occupied two floors. There were several other factories in the building on different floors. The managers of the factories feared thieves could pass from one factory to another by way of the fire escape, so they locked the doors leading to the fire escapes.

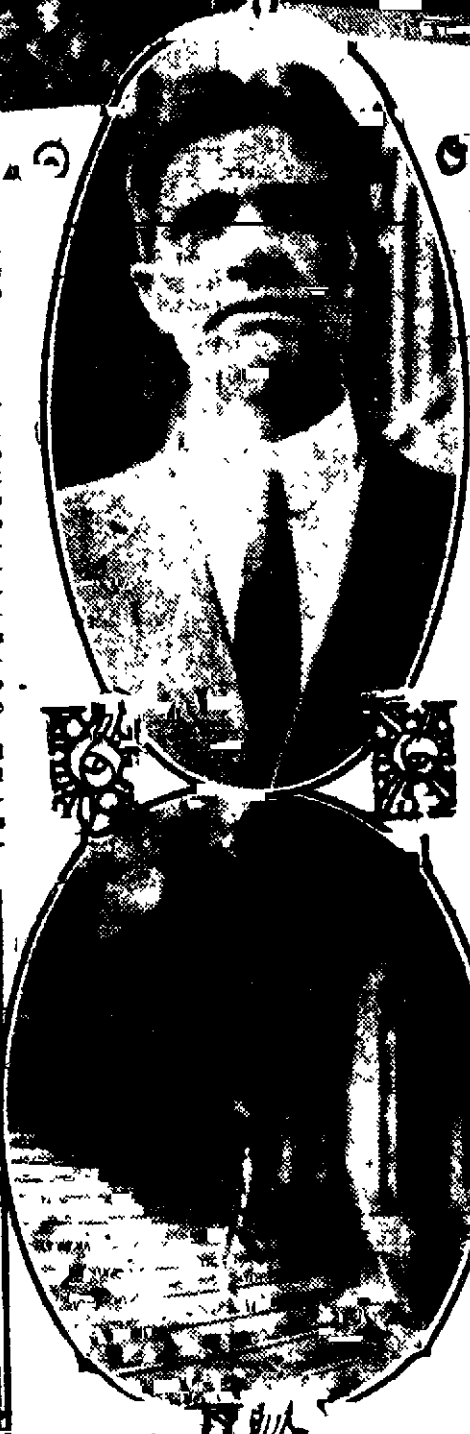

When the fire swept upward through the building, cutting off all means of escape by way of the elevators and stairs the working girls tried to escape down the fire es-paces. There was no chance. Running to the windows they then hurled themselves to the street.

Owners of buildings in this country do not think enough of their responsibilities in case of fire. One day when out on a fire I entered a big store where I found the fire escape filled with trash. Our laws require that such conditions shall not exist, but our machinery for law enforcement is inadequate. The man in the store did not think about the danger. The fire escape was a convenient place to pack his discarded boxes and waste paper. He had the place cleaned out at intervals.

Too many of us put faith in fireproof buildings. Former Fire Chief Crocker of New York declares there is no fireproof building which contains anything combustible. We put up a building of concrete steel and, like the Equitable Building in New York, we fill it with furniture. We lay wooden floors on the concrete floor so as to make walking easy. We put in wooden partitions and wooden doors. When a fire starts it sweeps up the elevator shaft. The heat from one floor sweeps to the next. Smoke from the lower floors rises and suffocates those on the floors above.

The Equitable Building was a needless loss. When the place caught fire, the engine room crew thought they could put it out themselves. The building is right in the heart of the financial center of New York City and is surrounded with engine houses which could have reached the scene of the fire in a few minutes. The engine crew soon realized they could not control the fire and turned in a call for help. In the meantime the fire gained great headway.

The first skyscraper of New York City, with its marble walls, soon was burned out. The fireproof floors and walls melted with the heat of the varnished furniture and went crashing into the basement. Six men lost their lives. Among the dead was Fire Chief Walsh, who was leading a party of firemen on a rescue sortie through the burning building.

The fire took place in January, 1912, when it was bitter cold in New York. Water turned into ice and the firemen were ice-encrusted even when standing so near the flames they were scorched.

Factory fires are by far the most horrible of all on record. The Triangle Waist Company fire, when 147 lives were lost, is the most appalling of its kind in recent years. The Binghamton Clothing Company fire at Binghamton, N. Y., last July, was a repetition of the Triangle fire on a smaller scale. In both cases the great loss of life was in women and girls. Of the thirty-five lives lost in the Binghamton fire, thirty-three were women and girls.

They had little chance to escape. The building was only four stories high, and because of its small size, no particular care was provided for escape in time of fire. Those on the top floor, when they found they were trapped so they could not get down the stairs and elevators, ran to the inadequate fire escapes. The fire escapes were crowded with factory help from the lower floors. The only hope of salvation was in jumping as the fire rushed upward through the floors with terrific speed. The terrified women leaped to the street where they were dashed to death. There was no chance for the firemen to do anything. The fire was to the roof in a few minutes. It is believed it was started by a cigarette.

The Triangle Waist Company fire is believed to have started the same way. It burned some time in the heaps of trash unnoticed. When it once had a good start there was no stopping it. The suction up the stairs and elevators made escape impossible that way. The locked fire escapes made escape impossible that way. The only escape was by leaping and that was useless. The first thing the firemen knew the alarm sounded. They rushed to the poles in their fire departments and jumped to the main floor. The horses in the stables, hearing the gongs sounded, eagerly rushed from their stalls to the fire wagons. In an instant the harness for every horse was snapped in place and away the firemen tore.

As they neared the building a sickening sight met their gaze. Women and girls were getting in each other's way as they jumped to death.

The Missouri Athletic Club fire in St. Louis, where thirty lives were lost in the flames and more were lost due to falling walls, never could have happened in Prague or Vienna. The Europeans are more careful than we.

We smile at the carelessness of Europeans, but that smile costs us dearly. We not only suffer thirteen times as much in property loss as cities of the same size in Europe, we also suffer from the high rate of insurance.

We have a population of something like 90,000,000 people, and we use more matches than all the rest of the people of the world. In Berlin the fire loss averages 20 cents per capita. Indianapolis, many times smaller, has as big a fire loss as Berlin. St. Paul has made a good showing in cutting down the fire loss. She has gone as low as 37 cents per capita in one year. The per capita fire loss in Chicago is $2.59 annually; Kansas City, $4.77. St. Louis, $2.01; Milwaukee, $2.11.

Europe rarely hears of such destruction as occurred by fire in San Francisco after the earthquake when the people were allowed to re-enter their houses and start fires in their stoves. Of course the fires were cracked by the earthquake and the fire started in a hundred places at the same time.

We ought to have fire drills in our schools and factories. Employees in buildings which are built so they do not afford protection in case of fire, should complain to the authorities. We should have officials clothed with authority to enforce fire protection laws. We should be careful. In Sweden and Norway nearly all the buildings are of frame construction. But the Scandinavians are careful. Their annual fire loss is about one-tenth as much as ours.

Our country is rich. We can stand the property loss. We can pay the millions it costs to throw matches and cigarettes in the corners of the buildings. But think what good use we could put the money to if it were not burned up. Every year we erect millions of dollars' worth of built-up structures that are replaced by others which have been destroyed.

Our loss of life is frightful. We kill 1,500 a year by fire, and the injured total 5,000. We would grow patriotic and fly to arms if an invading army swept across our country killing and maiming as the fire does. We ought to grow patriotic as it is and throw up breastworks of protection against fire.

The Cape to Cairo Lane.

The dream of a road from Cape to Cairo was in its inception a caravan route. The age of steam converted the caravan route into an iron road. It is completed from the Cape to Katanga, a distance, all rail, of 4,150 kilometers, or 2,593 miles. The Cape to Cairo is the "baseless fabric of a vision." It may be extended to Uganda, even to Yondokoro, but there it ends before the 1,200 miles of marsh that separates it from Khartoum. The immense length defeats its real purpose. The road stops at Kambove, which may be dubbed the capital of Katanga—Katanga that is neither German nor British, but Belgian.

In 1906 all England made war of Leopold, King of the Congo Free State, because of alleged "atrocities" committed by Belgians in the process of rubber exploitation. On Morel was England's intermediary and Morel having stirred up the press to the boiling point, an appeal was made to our Secretary of State, Mr. Root, and February 20, 1906, Mr. Root administered to Morel a sharp rebuke. Likewise, none of the signatory powers would interfere. Nevertheless, King Leopold, yielding to British pressure, turned over the Congo Free State to Belgium. The King of the Congo was sacrificed, but the Free State and its rights were merged with those of Belgium.

There is no indication that Belgium will sacrifice her rights in Africa either to Germany or to England and east of all to England. The Belgians, on the contrary, insist upon the urgent necessity of standing firm and exploiting the interests of her vast African colony.

On April 30, 1910, King Albert presided at the inauguration of the Terrestrial of the colonial museum, and declared that the Belgian Congo lacked a distinctly Belgian railway system. The German railway actually completed would turn over to Germans all the trade and traffic of the lower Katanga. If Belgium would maintain her economic preponderance in their Congo colony she must make a supreme effort to save her interests or lose them.

Katanga is the Belgian key to the central African situation. If Belgium does not keep the key she will be driven from Africa by England or by Germany. Belgium may establish her general traffic as follows:

The Most Beautiful Arm—

Harrison Fisher

Famous Illustrator, Declares Louise Bates is One of Few Women With Characteristics to Make Up the Classic Grecian Upper Limb.

This is what Harrison Fisher, the artist of keen selection in the field of womanly loveliness, has said about the feminine arm.

"Beautiful arms are the greatest rarity. Elbow and wrist bones will, as a rule, protrude themselves and spoil the clear, unbroken line. Woman's greatest asset towards perfect loveliness is a perfect arm."

"The woman with the most beautiful arm, according to Fisher, is Louise Bates, prima donna of 'The Passing Show.'"

Fisher had seen Miss Bates. Ever since, he has been a beautiful, enthusiastic ally when it makes its appearance in graceful length, or in soft, smooth perfection, the artist recognized at once the mingling of the two in this new bid to his artistic taste.

"Miss Bates' arm gives the charming impression of the classic arm," he said. "It is the most perfect I have seen."

The classic arm is no tapering, plumb prettiness, but a sweeping, noble line from shoulder to finger tips of all the strength and tenderness that is in the feminine embodiment.

And beyond a doubt, Miss Bates may congratulate herself upon possessing an arm which is not alone a thing of beauty, but an inspiration.

From her rounded shoulder it is smooth-skinned, tapering, firm, slender and soft. It gives an impression of lithe muscle beneath its satiny surface, a strength that ripples along its length on a line of health and loveliness. A dimple has sunk the white flesh of the elbow. Here as at the wrist, there is no unsightly bone protruding its peak to break the beauty of contour. The wrist is round and small, with blue veins. It joins gracefully the white, pink-tipped hand.

Such arms are the inspiration of sculptors and painters. They gleam upon conceptions of every type of woman, their mingled strength, their beauty of line and tender curve, serving for whatever mood the artist wishes to work into his forms.

Eloquence is their keynote. No part of the body possesses this attribute to the same extent, except, perhaps, the hands, and they cannot be considered without the arm.

Consider the glory of the arm of Judith, or of Thersites, for instance. In both of these figures the arm proclaims the temper, the mood, the thoughts that are bringing the body that hauteur, that ease of regal vengeance. The arm dominates the entire conception.

Judith stands outside the tent of Holofernes, tense, dark, magnificent, grasping her sword. Every softness has gone from the arm that can be soft when it wills. It is the arm of battle of hate and will strike surely, swiftly when one feels, "It is the speaking arm."

Then there is Thersites, glorious unbroken figure of a scowled, scorned, despised, humiliating path through the triumphal procession of Hector. The woman is blonde and regal. Her robes flow freely about her feet. Her arm hangs over the head of her small son, marching with her.

Here is an ever more elegant arm than that of Judith. It is a white member, strong as a lance, extended by the beauty of its motion, as if it touched the head of her child. It is ready to strike, to protect, and to caress. It flows in the very conception of the whole, and carries the attention.

The arm of Judith, however, has a subtle device to catch attention. The most part that are slim and pale, the pale branches of a delicate tree. With every wind of the dance, they move to intensify, at her will, her expression, her face, her hair, her dress, her whole. The dancer's arm is as necessary to her expression as her feet or head.

Then there are the arms of the Greek goddesses—Athena, Aphrodite, and others. Take one of them and the picture of loveliness and grace, and the line of the arm is the most perfect of all. It is the arm of a goddess, and it is the arm of a woman of great beauty.

Her slaying of the general was accomplished through her clear-headedness, and through the strength of her arm. Artists are fond of picturing her with an arm of great beauty.

The ancients doubtless had better opportunity to study the beauty of the human arm than persons of modern times because the women of the ancient lands lived in regions of perpetual warmth. They were little covering for the arm.

The summer weather made it possible for them to go without covering. Artists had every opportunity for study. Their goddesses were simply the most beautiful women of their own lands. Their statues of fabled women were in reality images of women of the time.

Greece had no more beautiful women than America, but their beauty has been more exploited. The art of a race is no more wonderful than the beauty of their women. Given beauty, it is then the opportunity of the artist to copy it faithfully.

American artists have found women with the perfect classic features. Where the artists have found their duty faithfully, they have been able to copy beauty in abundance in America. There are many American women whose beautiful arms have captivated. Kitty Gordon has charmed thousands. Elsie Janis is the delight of as many more. Gertrude Elliott and Maxine Elliott have their followers who have opened their eyes wide in admiration.

The new styles of dress are an aid to the woman with beautiful arms. Short sleeves are convenient in the summer, but more than that they show the arm.

All ornamentation is expended on the skirt of the dress, leaving the bodice almost transparent, with a décolletage more widely cut out than that of last season, and with sleeves that are fairly nonexistent. The back of the dress is cut down until its outline of lace, almost touches the belt. Nor is that belt very high, for the Empire idea of the waist line is not in first favor.

Skirts are tighter and trains are small and narrow.

There is a low skirt, however, which is more likely to find favor. This is the "jazz-skirt," which, made in rich and soft materials, forms a very graceful undergarment to an overdress of gold tulle, having a mesh studded with small pearls at its four corners. Bodies are only touched with the heavier material, which serves to relate the transparency of the upper part, and with this skirt the corset is of the gold mesh studded and embroidered with pearls. Brilliants form a fringe on a skirt of net, for the whole of the top of it, which confines the form of the waist just a trifle, is one immense beauty, while the corset is also similarly decorated.

PEARLS AND BRILLIANTS
DRAPE ACROSS SHOULDERS.

Pearls and brilliants are used to form long chains, which are draped around skirts or across the shoulders to give some suggestion of a finish to the top of the arm. The stiff wired tunic, which resembles a lampshade, is not at all likely to find favor. In Vienna it has been modified and improved until its lines are graceful, shorter to the front, longer behind and formed of tulle plissé, lace studded with brilliants, sometimes outlined with a heavy fringe of tulle. Frocks of silk, so soft that it might be pulled through a ring, are often worn for the wear of young girls. Narrow little girdles of black tulle border the tunic with trails of rocco flowers embroidered above them. Three colors are usually introduced into the wide belt, that stretches well down over the hips, and is sometimes tied in a fancy bow at the side or back.

In these days there is surely no detriment in achieving a good effect in a chain of the house of appearance, and in the thought out trifles. The dainty lace collars and sleeve ruffles, bolos and neckwear, veils and gloves, when carefully selected and all of vast importance when aiming at that much desired result—perfection in all things.

It is curiously interesting to note how different personalities express themselves in different ways. There is the woman who is always charming to look upon, well groomed, finished to her finger tips, with dainty little touches here and there about her attire, to a flower at her waist or a pretty comb in her hair, that when she has gone leave one with a pleasing memory of a delightful presence—a recollection that has unconsciously been emphasized by these small details.

ORIENTAL WOMEN MAKE BEAUTY FINE ART.

The belles of the Far East make a fine art of beauty culture. These Oriental beauties spend most of their days in preserving their health and good looks.

Oriental families guard as secrets the making of certain subtle perfumes. One family has its method of capturing the scent of the rose, another that of the jasmine, and the skin, hair and clothes of the women of these families are always saturated with delicious scents.

After the hot bath each morning the scalp is massaged, and for this an oil made of olive wood or cocconut is used. Next the hair is dressed in a manner to suit the contour of the face. Cosmetics are used for the eyebrows and skin, and night and morning a complexion beautifier, supposed to be infallible, is employed. This consists of milk, into which the juice of a lemon has been squeezed.

on an upland farm north of Topeka for several years. In a statement made to Mr. Mohler and published in the Country Gentleman, Mr. Miller tells of his experiment as follows:

"The second year of my experiment I wanted to know the value of sweet clover as a milk producer. I took ten average milk cows from good pasture and bluegrass pasture about May 10 and put them into this sweet clover pasture. It had attained a very rich growth and was more than two feet high.

"The cows were kept there two weeks and at the end of that time I milked an average of five gallons of milk a head. About June 1 I returned the cows to the bluegrass pasture and in two weeks they had lost the five gallons that had been gained."

"I thought back to sweet clover in two weeks they gained three gallons. The weather was very hot and the clover was really too rank for the best results. But those cows maintained an excellent flow of milk throughout the season on this little half-acre tract of sweet clover. For pasture, it is far better than alfalfa, in at least one respect: it contains a poisonous ingredient which is wholly harmless to stock and which eliminates any possibility of bloating in ruminants, which is the most serious drawback to alfalfa as a pasture plant.

"Horses are especially fond of sweet clover as pasture and hay, and hogs and cattle thrive on it. Chickens, big and little, like young sweet clover better than alfalfa."

While Kansas farmers are taking more interest in fertility, as a drought resisting crop it might be well for them to take more than passing interest in what has heretofore been considered a roadside weed.

It is sweet clover, that is now assuming wonderful possibilities as a forage plant in Western Kansas. Sweet clover has always been considered a weed and strenuous efforts have been made to stamp it out along the highways, because the farmers considered it worthless as a feed. In fact, it was considered a noxious weed, almost as bad as the Russian thistle. Several efforts were made to get the legislature to pass a law requiring the farmers to pull sweet clover from going to seed and compelling them to cut it along the highways.

It was not until the New England farmers found that sweet clover would grow on their abandoned farms, make fine forage crops in addition to rehabilitating the land that Kansas discovered that it had something in its worst weed that was really worth while. The sweet clover was long regarded as worse than the Kansas thistle.

Last fall George Finney and C. I. Zerk of Garden City sold a single acre of sweet clover seed for what they received $100 in cash. It was sold to a local seed firm, Finney now has 1,500 acres of sweet clover. The Finney Investment company has 500 acres of sweet clover near Charleston, in Gray County, and the company has been offered $12.50 a bushel for the seed.

There is no question of the value of sweet clover. Prof. H. F. Roberts of the Kansas Agricultural College, in a report on the plant, said:

"You may rest confident that the two parts, sweet clover and alfalfa, are almost identical in chemical composition when taken at the same age under the same conditions. Further, there is no doubt that if sweet clover is taken young enough so it is not too starchy, it contains practically the same feeding value as alfalfa."

THE GREATEST HEALTH RESORT

A VACANT LOT

BY BILLY MURPHY.
A great baseball player has been sent back to the minors. Volumes of applause have greeted him for many years for his wonderful deeds on big league diamonds. This season it is back to the bushes. We won't tell you his name. Let's just call him John Smith. And this once great ball player, the day he was notified that he was to go, sat watching the work of the the great national game begins. And how it grows! He has posters of Hans Wagner and Ty Cobb and several other baseball stars in his collection at home, and he has all the guides in addition to the first one which started his little library. He knows all the batting averages clear down to the meanest stricker in the list. He has two dollars in the bank; but more wonderful than all else, he has a battered ball of his own youngster who had beaten him out of his job.

This kid from the vacant lots was to supercede him.

The old player knew that he had seen his day and that the specter of usefulness had set upon him, but while he still listened to the chant of the minors calling him, he arose, walked straight out to the kid from the vacant lot and shook his hand. "You're a better ball player than I am my boy," he said.

FASCINATION OF GAME ENTHRALLS YOUNGSTERS.

There spoke a man. John Smith was figuring in one of the tragedies of the national game. The training season was over and he had lost where so many seasons before he had won.

Now it was his turn.

After all it's the corner and the vacant lots that are the real breeding places of ball players.

There the fascination of the national game first enthralled. We have heard of men who were lured away from their homes by the irresistible charm of the South Pacific with its coral isles and golden sands and palm trees glowing in the sun but to the small boy there is no lure as attractive and seductive as the diamond that is pitched upon a vacant lot.

It is there that his first love for any there is a bat behind the bunk and a dimly lit glow hanging from a bulb over the soap box with two pennies in a wash skin.

Yes, it is a small ball player and his dream is the terror of the other lot.

Every afternoon after school he may be seen practicing—always practicing.

Some of the curves he pitches would make Mathewson green with envy, and his strike out records would cause the soul of Walter Johnson such heart-rending anguish that he would not be able to sleep.

Then comes the day when, pitching for the Little Polars Hard to Peel, he hangs it on the Bleeker Street Sluggers.

That day sees his arrival at the estate of a real ball player.

The years roll on and he plays semipro ball. Then he attracts the attention of a few scouts from some small league.

It is not long before some newspaper publishes the little item that Jimmy Smith has signed with some minor league team.

Then but a little while and he gets a chance with some big league team. He makes good.

And another vacant lot boy has graduated.

The ambition of most boys who play on the lots is to be the mascot for one of the big league teams.

They watch little McCarthy of the Boston Red Sox or Hennessey of the New York Giants and sigh with envy.

Have you ever watched Hennessey?

He's a whole lot different from the lads of the vacant lots.

But our corner boys, although his clothes may be old and his feet bare, his face unwashed and unkempt his hair, probably knows just as much baseball as Mr. Hennessey.

The chances of the corner lot urchin to succeed in baseball, are better than they ever were before. Baseball has grown in every way and the older players for the most part take a kindly interest in the beginners.

They are generally philosophic and fair in their way, with the policy of let the best man win, just as John Smith was in the beginner of this little story.

They know the young fellow from the lots is after one of their jobs and conditions are bound to be more or less strained, but after all it is part of the game, and this rivalry is by no means so unpleasant as might be supposed.

It is something to one's credit in baseball to have come up from the lots. It's a recommendation rather than a handicap in beginning relations with the big leaguers.

And after all, it is the spirit of the corner lot man that wins.

In the game of baseball played for all it is worth you must see it contested by two rival corner lot teams.

To see it at its very height, let the contest be one which will decide a neighborhood championship. It is not meant to be insinuated that the game as played will show you such hair-raising stops and lightning throws as you will see turned loose by the professionals.

What we mean is that no professional ever displays such intense earnestness and self-evident determination to win as do the corner lot boys.

In event of defeat, the lot boy gets no glory and no pay.

SPRIT AND HEART OF BOYS OF CORNER LOTS.

But he puts more heart into his work and more real "pep" than all the big league players put together. It is the same way on the school teams.

Take Loyola Academy in St. Louis. From the instant the umpire says "Play ball" at that home of learning and young ball players, there is always something doing. Every player on the side in the field is talking like mad, encouraging his pitcher and attempting to frustrate the batsman.

On the other side, as soon as the law will allow, their coaches start up a rival din.

To the person witnessing such a contest for the first time, it would be a test of vocabulary and lung power, rather than a display of baseball skill.

But the boy who makes good on the diamond at that particular academy, in that Missouri city, need have no fear of prostration. They grow real scholarly men there.

Without doubt in doing this often injustice, is done not only to the candidates, but also to the coach.

The process of weeding out candidates is much more difficult for a coach in a high school than it is at college.

The boys in the grammar schools have played practically nothing but corner lot baseball. It is difficult to get a correct line on them.

As a rule nearly every prospect for a college nine has had some experience on the diamond and his reputation has preceded him.

For this reason, attention is naturally turned toward him and his preparatory school training is of so great assistance in making final selection.

In high schools nearly every who has ever seen a baseball player's chances are good for the team.

Very few of the army which sends itself at the first call candidates have ever been in contest, and consequently the new before the season is a perplex one.

Another condition of affairs exists which makes high school coaching a difficult proposition. The fact that the games begin as soon as the squad out-of-doors and before it can get much batting practice.

The next few days must practically decide the make-up of the squad, and in this selection caution and judgment must be exercised.

It is never safe to figure too far on the number of candidates which is to comprise the final team, for the coach can never when the faculty "will get busy."

Of course, it is the boy's duty to do acceptable work, lessons and to this end a good can be of much assistance, but the boy and to his teachers.

CASE OF WILLIE SMITH WHO FATTENED IN PINCH.

But human nature (and boys are human), is liable to and it is more than discouraging, have to put weeks of work on candidate to leave just before important game that he is doing his studies and consequently play.

The problems of the high school coaches are many and they all concern the corner lot boy who is going to become a Hercules of ball.

And if the school coach is careful he will pluck wrongs and on his way the wrong of recruit, like the lad who, down South for training.

"He pitched one practice and after all that happened he never be the same. They had

Young America's Discovery

A VACANT LOT

BY PHILLY MURPHY.

A great baseball player has been sent back to the minors.

Volume of applause have greeted him for many years for his wonderful dash on big league diamonds.

This year it is back to the minors.

We won't tell you his name. Let's just call him John Smith.

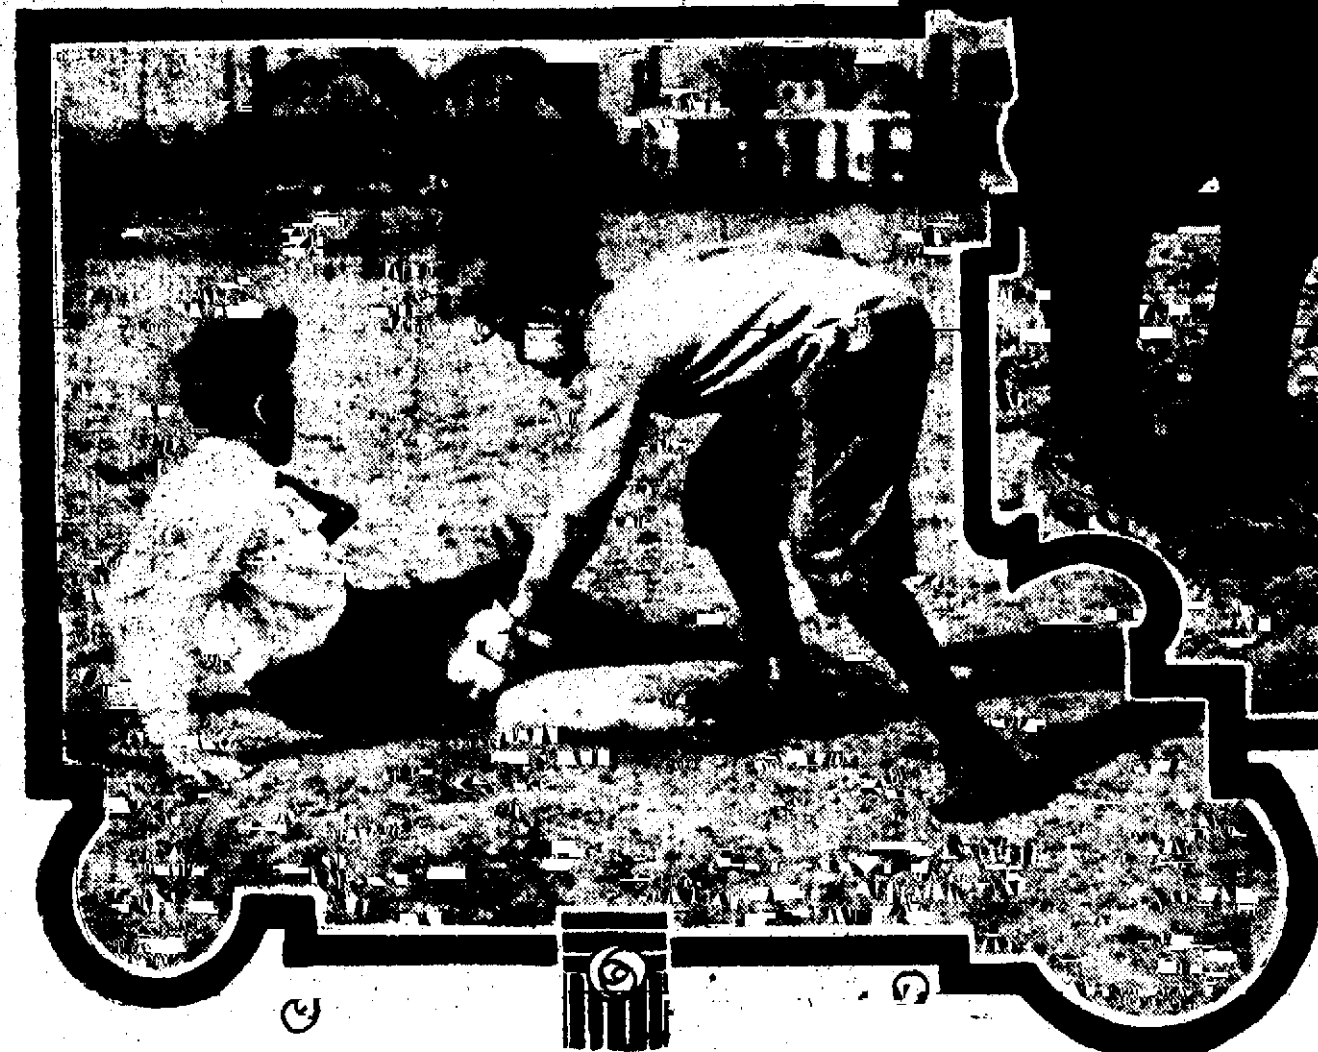

And this is a great ball player, who has been so good that he was to go, out with the work of the

the great national game today. And how it grows!

He has posters of Babe Wagner and Ty Cobb and several other baseball stars in his collection at home, and he has all the guides in addition to the first one which started his little library.

He knows all the batting averages clear down to the meanest sticker in the list.

He has two dollars in the bank; but more wonderful than all else, he has a battered ball of his own youngster who had beaten him out of his job.

This kid from the vacant lots was to supersede him.

The old player knew that he had seen his day and that the sunset of usefulness had set upon him, but while he still listened to the chant of the minors calling him, he arose, walked straight out to the kid from the vacant lot and shook his hand.

"You're a better ball player than I am, my boy!" he said.

FASCINATION OF GAME. ENTHRAILS YOUNGSTERS.

There spoke a man.

John Smith was figuring in one of the tragedies of the national game. The training season was over and he had lost, where so many seasons before he had won.

Now it was his turn.

After all, it's the corner and the vacant lots that are the real breeding places of ball players.

There the fascination of the national game first enthralled.

We have heard of men who were lured away from their homes by the irresistible charms of the South Pacific with its coral isles and golden sands and palm trees glowing in the sun, but to the small boy there is no lure as attractive and seductive as the diamond that is pitched upon a vacant lot.

It is there that his first love for and there is a bat behind the bunk and a dilapidated glove hanging from a nail over the soap box, which does Jimmy for a wash stand.

Yes, Jimmy is now a ball player and his drop-ball is the terror of the corner lot.

Every afternoon after school he may be seen practicing—always practicing.

Some of the curves he pitches would make Mathewson green with envy, and his strike-out records would cause the soul of Walter Johnson such heartfelt anguish that he would not be able to sleep.

Then comes the day when, pitching for the Little Potatoes Hard to Peel, he hangs it on the Blecker Street Sluggers.

That day sees his arrival at the estate of a real ball player.

The years roll on and he plays semi-pro ball. Then he attracts the attention of a few scouts from some small league.

It is not long before some newspaper publishes the little item that Jimmy Smith has signed with some minor league team.

Then but a little while and he gets a chance with some big league team. He makes good.

And another vacant lot boy has graduated.

The ambition of most boys who play on the lots is to be the mascot for one of the big league teams. They watch little McCarthy of the Boston Red Sox or Honansey of the New York Giants and sigh with envy.

Have you ever watched Honansey?

He's a whole lot different from the lads of the vacant lots.

But our corner boys, although his clothes may be old and his feet bare; his face unwashed and unkempt his hair, probably knows just as much baseball as Mr. Honansey.

The chances of the corner lot urchin to succeed in baseball, are better than they ever were before.

Baseball has grown in every way and the older players for the most part take a kindly interest in the beginners.

They are generally philosophic and fair in their way, with the policy of let the best man win, just as John Smith was in the beginner of this little story.

They know the young fellow from the lots is after, one of their jobs and conditions are bound to be more or less strained, but, after all, it is part of the game, and this rivalry is by no means so unpleasant as might be supposed.

It is something to one's credit in baseball to have come up from the boys. It's a recommendation rather than a handicap in beginning relations with the big leaguers.

And, after all, it is the spirit of the corner lot man that wins.

To see the game of baseball played for all it is worth, you must see it contested by two rival corner lot teams.

To see it at its very height, let the contest be one which will decide a neighborhood championship.

It is not meant to be insinuated that the game as played will show you such hair-raising stops and lightning throws as you will see turned loose by the professionals.

What we mean is that no professional ever displays such intense earnestness and self-evident determination to win as do the corner lot boys.

In event of defeat, the lot boy gets no glory and no pay.

SPIRIT AND HEART OF BOYS OF CORNER LOTS.

But he puts more heart into his work and more "pep" than all the big league players put together.

It is the same way on the school teams.

Take Loyola Academy in St. Louis. From the instant the umpire says "Play ball" at that home of learning and young ball players, there is always something doing.

Every player on the side in the field is talking like mad, encouraging his pitcher and attempting to frustrate the batsman.

On the other side, as soon as the law will allow, their coaches start up a rival din.

To the person witnessing such a contest for the first time, it would be a test of vocabulary and lung power, rather than a display of baseball skill.

But the boy who makes good on the diamond at that particular academy, in that Missouri city, need have no fear of prostration. They grow real scholarly men there.

Loyola, like Holy Cross, has some great junior ball teams.

Those who might be mentioned are: Russell Murphy, Eugene Robertson, Marcell Block, Ted Duggan and Meehan-Kelly.

In Boston during the past two years there has been much controversy as to the advisability of permitting professional coaching in the high schools of the city.

Without doubt, there are arguments on both sides of the question, but if a certain thing is to be done, there is no reason why it should not be well done.

There is one thing certain and that is that as long as boys exist, so long will the game of baseball be played.

Now, if the game is to be played by our youngsters, why not have it played in the same manner as you would like to have your place played?

We appreciate that baseball is not an actual necessity, but if a school is to be represented on the diamond and its boys are to be permitted to get into the game, they surely should have supervision.

If anyone doubts this statement, let him ask the head master of any school.

A company of boys without supervision is about as irresponsible as would be a bull in a china closet.

Let this supervision be conducted by someone who is not only able to restrain any overflowing enthusiasm, but let him be an individual who is capable of imparting a knowledge of how the national game should be played.

REDUCING SQUAD OF BASEBALL ASPIRANTS.

One of the first difficulties the coach of a high school team has to encounter is the reducing of the original squad of aspirants.

Owing to the lack of a baseball cage, usually the only indoor work that can be done is pitching and catching.

As the first games come so early in the spring, and as the season is so short, in order to accomplish much in the line of team play the preparatory school training is of no great value once in the final selection.

In high schools nearly every boy who has ever played a ball game has played it well.

Very few of the army which meet itself at the first call of candidates have ever been in a contest, and consequently they are now in the position of being a puzzle.

Another condition of affairs exists which makes high school coaching a difficult proposition. The fact that the games begin most as soon as the squad is out-of-doors and before it can get much batting practice.

The next few days must practically decide the make-up of the squad, and in this selection caution and judgment must be exercised.

It is never safe to figure too heavily on the number of candidates which is to comprise the final team, for the coach can never when the faculty will get his duty to do acceptable work in the line of this end and a good can be of much assistance, be the boy and to his teachers.

CASE OF WALTER JOHNSON.

But human nature (and boys are human), is liable to and it is more than discouraging to have to put weeks of work on candidates to learn just before the important game that he is doing his studies and consequently play.

The problems of the high school coaches are many and they all earn the corner lot boy who is going to become a Hercules of the ball.

And if the school coach is careful he will pluck enough send on his way the wrong of recruit, like the lad who down South for training.

"He pitched one practice and after all that happened he never be the same. They laid squad must be cut up very early.

Without doubt in doing this often injustice is done not only to the candidates, but also to the coach.

The process of weeding out candidates is much more difficult for a coach in a high school than it is at college.

The boys in the grammar schools have played practically nothing but corner lot baseball. It is difficult to get a correct line on them.

WOOD ALCOHOL

From the Journal of the American Medical Society.

Much has been written in recent years regarding the harmful influence of wood alcohol, and its injurious effect not only on eyesight, but on life itself. The importance of adequate protection of the public in this regard is emphasized by a recent tragedy in New York city. Three women died and two were made dangerously ill from drinking home-made wine at a wedding feast. The wine was made by the bridegroom and was drunk by the 200 guests present. The recipe for the beverage, the police say, was sugar, water, alcohol and a red and green coloring matter. It was first thought

Old General and Young Army Officer Fight a Miss-Fire Duel in Moscow

MOSCOW, April 18.—A miss-fire duel took place here today after an attempt in a street car between a young staff lieutenant and a retired general over 60.

The young officer challenged the general and the challenge was immediately accepted and pistols named as weapons.

The two men retired to a nearby woods and prepared for the duel. When the signal to fire was given neither one pulled a trigger.

The general afterwards explained that he could not risk destroying a young life and one which might be valuable to his country over a trivial matter. While the lieutenant said it was impossible for him to fire on an opponent who had not raised his arm. No reconciliation was effected.

that the women were suffering from the poison, but the coroner's physician pronounced death to be due to alcohol poisoning, and the police declared that the wine was made with wood alcohol. This dangerous poison often kills and even when the life of the victim is spared, he is generally blinded for the rest of his life.

GEN. COXLEY LEADING ANOTHER 'ARMY' ON NATIONAL CAPITAL

Says Coxley We Now Must Take Control of the Unemployed Problem

By SIDNEY ESPEY.
WASHINGTON, April 18.—For the fourth time in its history the national capital is preparing for an invasion. In 1814 Washington was captured by the British forces. In 1894 it was invaded by General Jacob Sevier Coxey and his "army," last year the suffragettes marched on the capital and now General Coxey is planning another "invasion."

The general, self-styled was in Washington the other day preparing for the reception of his "army" of the unemployed. The invasion is scheduled for May 27 and the general is authority for the statement that 50,000 men will march on Washington with demands that they be provided with jobs.

There are 5,000,000 unemployed men in the United States today. General Coxey told me while here, and I intend to bring at least 50,000 of them to Washington. The administration officials and the members of congress profess to doubt the situation which is now facing the country. I intend to bring ocular evidence to Washington to prove to the government officials that the United States is facing a business crisis.

Warned Congressmen.

"I warned the congressmen of this danger when I appeared before the banking and currency committee here on October 28, last. I have now sent a detailed statement to the president, the members of his cabinet, all members of the two houses of congress and the supreme court judges, stating what the conditions are, what has caused them, what we demand as remedies and what we propose to do if our demands are not met.

"I have given the officials of the government 45 days in which to inform themselves as to the object of this second march and as to the practicability and justice of our demands; whether we are to be treated as citizens under the constitution and allowed to present our petitions upon these matters and to be heard from the steps of the national capitol or denied that constitutional privilege and again cast into prison for trading upon special privilege."

Up Against It.

"From hard contact for 45 years with actual conditions as a business man I realize that now more than ever we are up against a gigantic shell game. My second march on the capital is to demand upon congress the need for providing our demand in order that these three laws be enacted:

"First, an act of congress to issue legal tender money and establish a federal bank in every community to lend money on real estate and chattel property at its assessed value at a 2 per cent tax instead of interest.

"Second, an act of congress to issue legal tender money and permit communities to issue noninterest bonds, borrow money on them from the United States treasury, hire the unemployed in road building and other public work, for purchase and supplying other public needs and to repay such loans without interest in 25 annual payments.

"Third, an act of congress to issue legal tender money to buy railroads, pipe lines, telegraphs and telephones at their physical values and to operate them at cost.

Ask Election Pledges.

"There are to be elected next November a house of representatives and one-third of the senate. A written pledge should be obtained from candidates for each of these offices before they are given the votes of the people, that they will vote for and use all honorable means to enact these three measures into law.

"I have just come from New York where there are half a million idle men. They, in chorus with 4,500,000 others, who are out of work, are asking 'Why are the works closing down? Why are the railroads curtailing their work and throwing out even the section hands?'

"Few persons realize the tremendous waste to the nation by the loss of 5,000,000 unemployed men daily. Even at an average of purchasing power of only $150 each it means $750,000,000 a day, $195,000,000 a month, $2,340,000,000 a year. If this lost labor were employed in building roads at $15,000 a mile it would build 150,000 miles of 18-foot brick roads a year or, in less than seven months it would entirely reconstruct the road system of the state of Ohio.

"The annual waste in purchasing power alone, not counting the value the men would create if employed, amounts to more than double the total annual expenses of our entire government.

Time to Call Halt.

"It is high time that all citizens should be aroused to a realization of these conditions and help make the true state of affairs known, so that we can bring about a change and a return to prosperity and make it permanent."

General Coxey informed me that the unemployed now are gathering in many states, ready to start a concerted march on the national capital. He will make all arrangements for carrying the men but he will depend on the hospitality and generosity of the Washingtonians to provide food for them.

"I will have to look a long way," Coxey continued in discussing his second march on the capital, "to find a man to take the place of Carl Browne, who was my marshal in 1894 and who died here last January. Browne was the most unselfish man of my entire acquaintance. He never gave a thought to pecuniary gain. His whole heart was in the movement to emancipate labor. He forced his mind to continuous and unceasing action along these lines until finally, nature overtook him, he dropped dead in the midst of his great life-work."

NEW CURRENCY PLAN SOON IN OPERATION

Will Be Established in Time to Move Fall Crops, It Is Hoped

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—One of the first real benefits to accrue from the new currency system, the first step in the inauguration of which was taken by the organization committee when it named the federal reserve districts, and cities, is a movement to meet the demands of the farmers in the crop transporting periods of the fall. While the time is short in which to put the new system into working condition for the next crop moving, Secretary of the Treasury William McAdoo believes that bankers throughout the United States will cooperate with the federal reserve board, name directors and immediately subscribe the capital stock of the reserve banks. Should the system, however, not be in working order by crop moving time, Mr. McAdoo states that the treasury department again will send into the various districts all the millions of dollars necessary to move the crops or prevent tight money conditions.

"The committee is aware that emergency resources for the crop moving period will be available either through the repetition of last year's crop loan or under the Aldrich-Vreeland act, which has been extended until July, 1915," said Mr. McAdoo. "But it is the desire of the committee to demonstrate the ability of the new system to meet the test of the crop movement without recourse to these emergency measures."

Much Yet to Be Done.

While there remains a tremendous amount of work to be done before actual banking business can be transacted through the reserve banks, treasury officials believe that with the progress that has been made so far, the work of the federal reserve board soon to be appointed by the president, will proceed rapidly.

Bankers generally are not as conversant with the provisions of the Owen-Glass measure as they should be. But this is not to be taken as a reflection upon the financial minds. Certain sections of the currency measure were clouded by the verbiage used by the framers of the act and, as usual many constructions of the sections are given by various experts who have read and attempted to explain them.

Sections 19 and 22 of the measure, relating to demand deposits, and the prohibitions placed upon officials, directors or employees of member banks, are not generally understood.

"Don't Worry" Sign.

The organization committee, however, has put out the "don't worry" sign, explaining that in the near future, correct interpretations of all sections of the act will be made by the federal reserve board and that all the bankers will have to do is to "sit tight" and wait.

And this in effect is just what the federal reserve board's business will be. It is charged under the law with the administration of the nation's currency system and in short the running of the financial affairs of the country. From time to time this board will hand down decisions relating to various sections of the act. It also will make regulations governing the conduct of the reserve banks and branch banks that will be established so as to facilitate banking conditions. It will be the governor of the financial machinery of the country.

No more will Wall street dominate the financial and business affairs of the country. It is hoped, nor will it have the ultimate say as to what section of the United States shall receive the support of the New York financial institutions. These powers will be reserved to the reserve banks which will control financial affairs absolutely. With this end in view the organization committee urged the country

St. Augustine Draws Money Spending Tourists Who Want to See Her Medieval Forts and Dungeons and Walk Along Her Narrow Streets Where Battles Were Fought

Augustine have one thing other Florida cities can not sell. The tourists like to open his eyes wide. The opportunity comes when the guide can show him the fountain of youth where Ponce de Leon took a bath. More to offer than other Florida cities in the way of pleasure. The old forts and walls and the narrow streets and monuments have look down the centuries 350 years. Old Fort Marion, begun in 1593 and finished in 1768, is the only medieval castle in America. It cost an enormous sum of money. Repeated heavy drafts of the builders caused the King of Spain to inquire if they were building Fort Marion of gold dollars. The castle stands today, guarded by the United States Government. The keeper conducts visitors through the castle, down into the dungeons, and shows you rings in the walls where victims of Spanish oppression were chained to die. Report, fairly well authenticated, has it that when the castle fell into the hands of the British, two skeletons were found in one of these dungeons chained to the wall. One was of a man, the other a woman. There is something uncanny about these dungeons that can not be described by word of mouth.

The old Spaniard held to the insula. These bits of islands are known as the phosphate belt. They are composed of shells, coral shells and calcareous of lime. There was but little vegetation on them for the soil had no power of production. In the future, of time, following the evolutionary period, millions of quadrupeds accompanied on their 60-day isles. Where they came from nobody knows. They deposited large amounts of bones and excreta, enriching the soil and stimulating plant life. The weeds of years past, new grasses grew out of the sea, adjacent islands came cemented, and through these processes the peninsula of Florida was added to the continent.

John H. Welch, who wrote most entertainingly on Florida, had in his possession some years ago an ancient coin, found several feet under the ground by a negro laborer doing house cleaning not far from St. Augustine. No student of ancient or medieval coins was ever able to trace this coin to its origin. The coin was found in a hole where found 15,000 years. The Smithsonian Institution have noticed the polished surface of a prehistoric hoard taken about twenty-five years ago from the Manatee River. "One of beads and human bones have been found in one heap far under the ground at a number of places in the State, leading to the conclusion that thousands of years ago man and beast inhabited the peninsula and were destroyed by some mighty cataclysm. Condition of these remains was such that the bones were found in their original positions, their ages from 35,000 to 100,000 years.

Down at Silver Springs, Fla. there is a "boneyard" from which hundreds of bones have been dug. The vertebrae of whales, as much as 15 inches in diameter, have been found there. In a pond nearby the petrified remains of a sea monster nearly a hundred feet long, are plainly seen. Sometimes this wonderful formation sparkles like a diamond in the sunlight. Scientists believe that the midshipman of the depths of the ocean and the sea monster are of the same species.

Both ancient and modern Florida are wonderful. The gradual evolution, through the works of nature of a sea waste into the garden spot of America forms a most wonderful story in geology and topography. The traveler of today looks out of a car window on fields and gardens, green with vegetation and sparkling with flowers, and wonders how it was that a combination between man and nature accomplished the change. He holds these wonderful Florida cities and towns, alive with modern energy and enterprise, shipping fruit and vegetables to all parts of the country, and a stream of gold flowing back in exchange. He sees railroads and steamships carrying an immense tonnage of freight between the Florida producer and the foreign consumer. Florida is the great fruit and vegetable basket of the nation.

To the Northerner, Jacksonville also has many points of historic interest. It was founded in honor of Andrew Jackson, who whipped the Indians for their repeated invasion of Georgia.

The St. John's River is navigable for about 200 miles, and private steamers make regular trips from Jacksonville to the head of navigation. The largest one-galley tugboat sails to Jacksonville, with passengers and freight, from all parts of the world. The river is an important factor in the life of the state.

The man who delves into antiquities will find much to interest him in Florida, for this State is probably the most wonderful land in America. When the Continent was in process of formation, clusters of small islands, poking their heads out of the sea, appeared here and there on the present Florida pen-founding of St. Augustine on a tour of the world. World tours in those days amounted to something more than a visit of one city and another riding the entire way in luxuriantly fitted state rooms.

Drake plundered the cities in New Spain, but none suffered more at the hands of the legendary English pirate than St. Augustine. He captured the city in 1586 and plundered the town. He took what riches he could find and after setting fire to parts of the city went away to report his variety of valor to Queen Elizabeth.

With the settlement of the English colonies to the North, St. Augustine became the center of attack for the colonists who could not bear to think Spaniards were living in the land of sun to the South.

The Spanish finally erected a wall for the protection of the city. Little of the wall remains. The old fort of San Marco, now called Fort Marion, is a well preserved specimen of Spanish architecture of almost 300 years ago. The castle is built in the form of a trapezoid and covers four acres. It is constructed of a shelly conglomerate quarried on Anastasia Island across the bayou from St. Augustine. This conglomerate is safe when under ground but when exposed to the weather hardens and becomes very durable.

The same material was used for paving the streets.

The southern end of the sea-wall is now a United States Barracks. It formerly was a Franciscan monastery. Among the interesting sights in St. Augustine is the Ponce de Leon Constitution, which takes its name from a monument in the center commemorating the liberality of the Spanish charter to the colony.

On this square stands an old Spanish cathedral with a Mexican belfry, the old Governor's palace.

In 1763 the British captured St. Augustine but Spain regained it in 1783. The Indians of Florida hiding in the Everglades became a constant menace to the citizens of Georgia so Andrew Jackson was ordered South to subdue them. He crossed the Spanish frontier into Florida and pursued the Indians to the Everglades. He set against the Spanish and caused a continuous talk of war. Spain, however, was involved in war with many of her other American possessions at the time. She finally decided to give Florida to the United States.

the sale was completed in 1821.

For a time St. Augustine had a rest from wars. The tramp of soldiers in her streets was heard no more until the outbreak of the Civil War. Three times the city then changed hands as the Federals and Confederates fought each other.

With the end of the Civil War the citizens began to realize her past had a market value. They saw such an interesting old town would draw tourists with wide open purses. They saw where leisure loving people of the North would delight to bask in the winter sun and feel the desert breezes in summer. Some of the most beautiful hotels in the South were erected there for the accommodation of winter tourists.

In reality St. Augustine has now a rest from wars. It does not have as good railroad service as Jacksonville. It does not have a better But the guide of St.

their value because of their age. St. Augustine more nearly than any other American city can present a European aspect and in that respect it is like a trip to Europe.

The settlement at St. Augustine antedates that of Jamestown by forty-three years; it is fifty-five years older than the Plymouth colony. Historians write much of Jamestown and Plymouth; poets sing of them, as the oldest settlements of the new world, each seemingly oblivious to the fact that St. Augustine is more than a generation older than either.

St. Augustine, with its splendid old age and much modernism, is but a couple of hours' ride from Jacksonville, with its modern skyscrapers and twentieth century enterprise. A visit to the ancient city will be one of the many delightful and educating side trips for reunion visitors. They will enjoy the trip and get a chance to

When Menendez de Aviles arrived off the coast of Florida on St. Augustine's day in 1565, little did he think that the city he founded on the banks of the bayou at the mouth of the Matanzas and San Sebastian Rivers would in time become a famous resort.

Little did the settlers of that city, the oldest permanent white settlement in the United States think the place where they lived and fought with pirates and invaders would some day become the scene of peaceful tango tarts.

The history of St. Augustine for its first 300 years of life was one of continued troubles for the little colony in the land of flowers. It was built on the old Spanish plan. The streets were narrow and are still narrow. Many of them are not more than a dozen feet wide. In that city, according to the legends, Ponce de Leon came in quest of the Fountain of Youth. An Indian old man pointed out a fountain and the Spaniards plunged into the water expecting to see his youth return. Disappointed he went away because he was still old. His step was still heavy and the spring of early life did not return.

Situated as St. Augustine is right on the ocean side, it early became a prey for pirates of that murderous period in the world's history when might made right. Founded in blood the city paid the penalty by suffering for three centuries. The first act of Menendez was to lead his soldiers to the St. John's River and attack the French settlement.

His warriors utterly destroyed the French. A French soldier retaliated later by attacking the town of St. Augustine and slaughtering many of the inhabitants. The raid of the French was followed by successive raids from the Indian thieves and later from the English. Sir Francis Drake, the arch king of the privateers, who had a commission from England to destroy any and all Spanish vessels he met, started out a few years after the

TEARING DOWN BUILDING SALE

Three or four more days -- then we vacate practically the whole rear half of our store -basement, first and second floors! Nearly 1,000 bargain lots await you

Only a few days in which we will have our full space. Then we begin to crowd and move around, ahead of the wreckers, until we must entirely vacate, which is only a matter of a few days, now. To make the most of these few short days, in which so much must be accomplished, we have reduced prices on hundreds and hundreds of lots. Practically our entire stock reduced to the point where you shall have to hurry if you want to participate in the best selection. Visit the Bennett Building, just north of us, to where we have already moved our notions, jewelry, ribbons, toilet articles, stationery and patterns. Visit the old Annex Building and see our great displays of wool dress goods and colored wash goods. Come! Buy! Do not deprive yourself of these savings. "Follow the crowds to Hibbard's!"

AN UNNECESSARY RAILROAD

THE action of the State Railroad Commission in ordering the management of the Cripple Creek District line to rebuild the abandoned portion of the Florence and Cripple Creek road is such an utterly wanton procedure that it is not surprising that the company is determined to carry the case to the Supreme Court rather than yield. The line in question was, we believe, the first railroad built into the Cripple Creek District, and for many years it was of great importance, chiefly for the transportation of ore to the mills at Florence and Canon City. But those mills were long since shut down and since then there has been almost no freight business on the line whatever.

The opening of the Short Line and the Midland Terminal likewise diverted the passenger business, so that, according to the railroad people, the F. & C. C. branch eventually carried an average of not more than half a dozen passengers a day. The line traverses a narrow gulch where maintenance was both expensive and difficult. A few years ago it was washed out entirely for a distance of several miles and thereupon abandoned.

It would be hard to imagine a more utterly unnecessary railroad than the one in question, yet merely to please the people of Canon City and Florence the Commission has ordered it rebuilt. The probable gross revenue of the line, when reopened, would not amount to as much in a year as the cost of reconstruction. Remembering the many important things which the Commission could do to improve railway conditions in Colorado, it seems to have devoted a great deal of effort to a trivial matter.

AN AUTOMATIC STREET SWEEPER

THE recent announcement that Commissioner Lawton has ordered an automatic street sweeper for use on the paved streets is more than welcome. Ever since the pavement was laid the problem of keeping the streets clean has been even harder than it was before. The force of men at work with brooms was increased, and a noisy, dust-making contraption has been operated at night, but despite these efforts the usual amount of dirt has been in evidence on every windy day.

The new machine is built on the principle of a vacuum cleaner, removing the dirt by suction. It is to be taken on approval, and if it proves satisfactory will soon pay for itself in increased comfort to people who use the downtown streets.

THE SUNDAY MEETINGS.

To the Editor of The Gazette
The frantic efforts of a number of prominent business men to keep Billy Sunday from coming to Colorado Springs are as foolish as they will be futile. The reasons given by this committee for opposing his coming have little foundation in fact. First, June is not a tourist month in Colorado Springs.

Second, there will be more visitors in Colorado Springs during the Sunday meetings than there were the same period last year. There will be from five hundred to a thousand visitors daily to attend the Sunday meetings. To my personal knowledge they are coming from the Arkansas valley and even from the western slope. These visitors will spend a great deal more money than the Sunday party will take out. The incidental fund now being raised will be spent here in Colorado Springs. The local officers of the Christian Endeavor local union are expecting a record-breaking attendance at their state convention here in June, because of the Sunday meetings.

The Sunday meetings will be an asset to the commercial life of the city. Real business will not suffer, but will be helped. The daylight scenic attractions will not be hurt. The theaters and picture shows will suffer. The pool halls, booze sellers, and other places where lawless elements are gathered will be hurt. The Sunday meetings will be a great help to the city. The local officers of the Christian Endeavor local union are expecting a record-breaking attendance at their state convention here in June, because of the Sunday meetings.

Colorado Springs, April 18

To the Editor of The Gazette
I read a story last week where Billy Sunday saved 600 souls in 15 minutes, that would be 3,600 souls per hour or $4,000 in an 8-hour day, that leads me to wonder why the people are paying millions for church and high paid ministers when Billy Sunday can do the whole job. At the rate he is saving souls, I believe that that will be the last of the "sinners" who will be saved. I believe that the "sinners" who will be saved will be the "sinners" who will be saved.

There may be truth, there may be good, where we, with our so often distorted vision, can see only error and wrong. Maybe there's a beam in our eye. "I see, sir," therefore, "let me be not judged."

ONEA BRITAIN AND MEXICAN TAXES

To the Editor of The Gazette:
There can be no doubt that the tax on land values or on labor productivity is the most important of the two poles of a state. All the taxes on labor products are paid by the producer, rich and poor alike, in higher prices for goods. The tax on land values is the tax on the wealth of the land, the tax on the wealth of the land.

As a substitute for the "poor rates" which are levied on the land, the tax on land values is a more equitable and a more efficient. It is a tax on the wealth of the land, the tax on the wealth of the land. It is a tax on the wealth of the land, the tax on the wealth of the land. It is a tax on the wealth of the land, the tax on the wealth of the land.

The Mexican situation is just what land piracy has made of it, and would not be improved by subjugation. The Mexican situation is just what land piracy has made of it, and would not be improved by subjugation. The Mexican situation is just what land piracy has made of it, and would not be improved by subjugation. The Mexican situation is just what land piracy has made of it, and would not be improved by subjugation.

SALUTE THE FLAG.

To the Editor of The Gazette:
If General Huerta, the Mexican leader, offers his apologies in a salute to the American flag for the many insults flung by the Mexican government, I for one feel that "Old Glory" should be hoisted on every school room, on every business house and city and county buildings over which it is hoisted in every school room, on every business house and city and county buildings over which it is hoisted.

Talks on Thrift

(American Thrift Association)
SAVING OF 1914
THRIFT—THE MAINSTAY OF THE NATION.

"When he threw himself so energetically into the movement for the conservation of his natural resources, Theodore Roosevelt, with statesmanlike persistence, compelled the nation to heed his warning and by dint of persistent reiteration, aroused the public conscience to a realization of conditions that were fast leading to bankruptcy and ruin."

Thrift is the individual and thrift in the government are more closely related than is often realized. Here is a great truth, a truth which it was high time several million people were beginning to realize. They cry for economy, for the elimination of waste in government and they do not practice economy in their private affairs. Only as we as a people become individually more thrifty—that is, more saving, more economical, more conservative—can we expect our country to be saved.

Consider thrift in its relation to the industries of the country. If everybody should save 10 per cent of his income every year there would be no capital for investment beyond that which is already invested; no new enterprises could be started; and improvements of all kinds, public and private, would be at an end. The world's supply of new capital is simply the margin between the world's income and its expenditures.

If we had more thrift we would have more temperance. How genuinely temperate the money spent for the 70,000,000 gallons of whiskey we drank in the last half of 1913 would be if turned into constructive industry not the benefits of thrift to be measured wholly in terms of economy. The standard of the industry, the sobriety, the respect for property, which is fostered among thrifty and frugal people are political virtues that make for stability and permanence of government.

The habitual spendthrift is a menace to the community and the nation, the careful citizen, guided by a sense of the true value of property is a safeguard to our institutions. Habits of extravagance tend to make trouble in the family, the community, the nation.

An "American Society for Thrift" has been organized in Chicago with the avowed purpose of "promoting nationally the individual thrift which is the basis of good citizenship and community prosperity." Men of prominence, including governors of several states, are back of the movement which aims to advocate a broad and sensible view of economy, pointing out to the people that as a great English statesman said, "Thrift is not meanness, but management."

The continued rise in the cost of living, unaccompanied by any great extent by a corresponding rise in individual income, is making many an American family right-at-arms in the matter of personal and domestic economy.

Perhaps the new thrift will reduce the cost of living eventually, but it hasn't yet. Possibly government investigating commissions may lead to that consummation, but there are no signs of it yet. And no other panacea has been found for it. Apparently, therefore, for the present at least, there is no hope of abating the steady rise in the price of everyday necessities, and, so far, no way has been found to beat the high cost of living except to stop living so high.

It is not quite possible that in good old fashioned thrift may be found the solution of the difficult problem of living up to modern standards under modern conditions.

T. D. MACGREGOR

SCRIPTURE

1 Peter 2: 17-25
Honor all men Love the brotherhood Fear God. Honor the king. Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear, not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward.

For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what glory is it, if when ye are buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God.

For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously. Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, being wounded for us, that we might be healed by his wounds. Whom ye have killed, yet he is alive, and he is at the right hand of God, and he is at the right hand of God.

FORBES-ROBERTSON SIGNS HENDERSON FOR ANOTHER YEAR

Editor of Gazette to Remain With English Actor

Ray Henderson, formerly dramatic editor of The Gazette, and who is now advance representative for Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, has just signed a contract for another season with the famous English actor. Mr. Henderson left Colorado Springs about three years ago to join Forbes-Robertson, and has been with him since. Both in America and England. On May 5 he will sail for London, returning to this country the latter part of August to make preparations for Forbes-Robertson's farewell tour of the west. Forbes-Robertson, who completes the first half of his farewell American tour at the Prince's theater, Montreal, Canada, on May 2, opens his next and final tour of America at Detroit, Sept. 1, her 28. This tour will take the great actor to the Pacific coast and by 1, but will not include any of the cities visited during his last season. He will appear at the Opera house, November 30 and December 1. Colorado Springs is, with the exception of New York and London, the only one-night stand he will make. Gertrude Elliott (Clady Forbes-Robertson) and her entire London company will be seen in his support. His repertoire includes 30 plays, two of the most popular of which will be given in this city.

A far-reaching effort to aid talented young musicians and at the same time to raise the musical standard in this country is to be made by the Music League of America, an organization which is being formed. At the head of the league are Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, Mrs. Alfred D. Straight, Mrs. Otto K. Kohn, Mrs. Linnae Blagden, Dave Kohn, Mrs. Kohn and Alvin Kohn.

The purpose of the league is to obtain church, concert and social engagements for young artists, passed on favorably by impartial judges. Ample financial backing is assured. The league has its headquarters in New York.

The Women's League of America and others in many parts of the country, together with independent vocalists, managers, have agreed to aid the league in its work.

The league will strive to eliminate the sectionalism in music and cultivate a taste for real art in places where it now is lacking. It will also attempt to dissuade persons with only mediocre talents from striving for musical careers and to supplement the artist with more business acumen than talent with the better musician who may lack the ability for self-advancement.

"Opera should be sung in the language in which they are conceived," says Maud Powell. "Parsifal" in English, "Pellaea and Melanide" in German, "Boris" in Italian, "Lurici" in Dutch, are inconceivable to me. The meanings of words do not seem to matter when in opera. Who ever hears enough of them to enlighten him as to the plot without reference to the libretto? For the records of the words, instead of the words, are in character with the music, a musical onomatopoeia which satisfies the aesthetic ear.

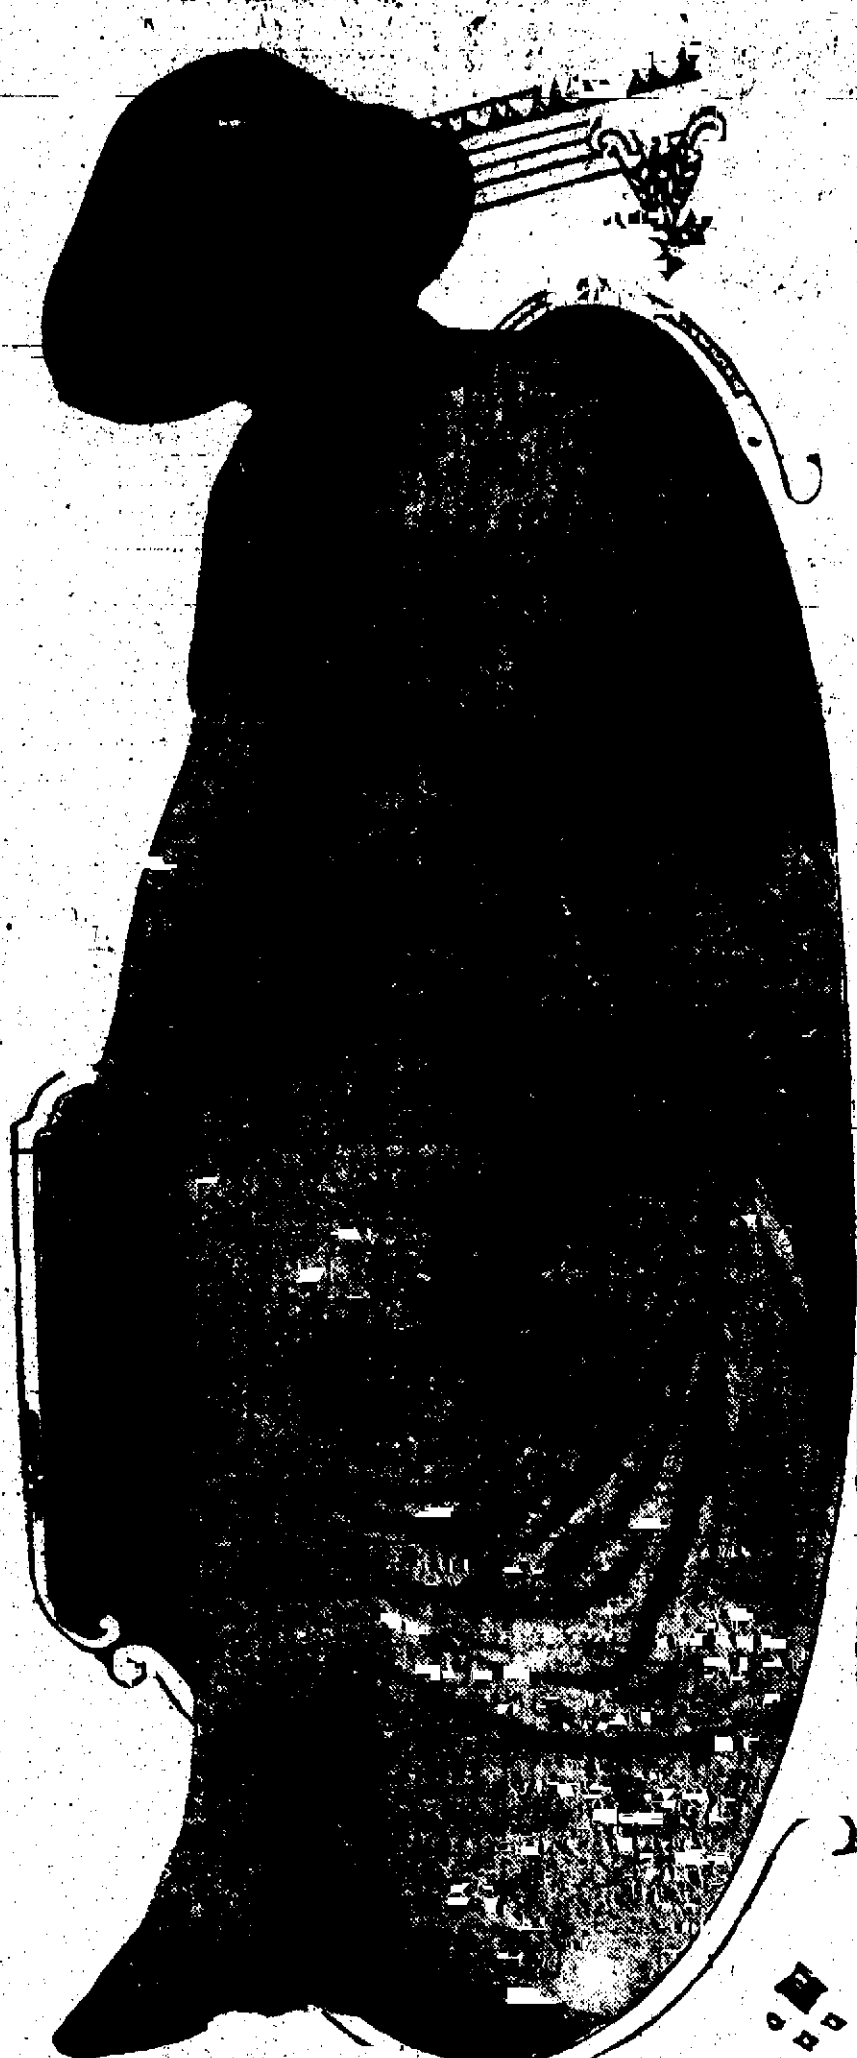

It is too soon to expect an American grand opera. We have no national school of composition. We have no distinctive musical utterance in invention or style. Speaking broadly and of the nation at large, we are still in the ragtime stage—the first rung of the ladder of our national musical expression. The amount of money spent by our nation on art and music is no criterion of our culture, but it is a splendid criterion of its intentions and ambitions and augurs well for future development.

That our language is expressive and singable I am convinced. If the reader does not agree, let him, at the first opportunity, go listen to the Scotchman, Harry Lauder, make our language rich and unadorned in "The Wee Hoose Maug the Heather".

There is another point about this all-opera-in-English question. Like arbitrary phonetic spelling, it is an inculcated attitude toward education and culture. It puts a premium on ignorance and philistinism and tries to justify mental laziness. We are "born equal" in these free United States, let us give the words a noble interpretation: born with equal rights to the chances of improvement and development, not with equal rights to lag behind the standards of other, older nations.

The Catholic theater movement has issued a second bulletin which increases its "white list" to include 120 plays. The very latest are not considered, but probably will be in time. Editorially stating that a standard is necessary, especially for the young, the bulletin adds:

"It is pitiful to leave the young subject to the soulless, unprincipled novelties of today that recognize no definite religion and no definite moral code. They paint the very air we breathe with the poison that there is no definite law, no definite, clean-cut teaching of God, no unquestionable, trustworthy revelation of Christ, that we are all bound to observe most scrupulously. With this, the most atrocious violations of life are depicted: they 'gild' a fair word to disguise the truth."

KATHERINE CALVERT

Who in private life is Mrs. Paul Armstrong, wife of the playwright, Miss Calvert has made a big success on Broadway since playing a minor role in Armstrong's "The Deep Purple," appearing as leading woman in two other Armstrong productions.

legitimate actress, Lydia Lopoukova, the Russian dancer, has made her decision to appear as a legitimate actress next season. She will appear under the management of Harrison Grey Fiske at the head of her own dramatic company in a play written for her.

"I am going to be a complete artist, not just part an artist," she says in her fascinating English, which is growing more perfect every day under the tutelage of Mr. Fiske. "I am going to speak lines, and in English-American English."

"Yes, I shall continue to dance for my own pleasure," in answer to a question, "but not ballet dancing. I like to originate and do things that are original, not like every one else. I shall do interpretative dancing, but only for myself and my friends, not appearing publicly."

"My play? Mr. Fiske is not ready to announce it, but it was written especially for me, and gives me great scope to prove myself an actress, which is the thing I want to do most of everything in the world."

Miss Lopoukova is still only a young girl, having begun her public appearances when 16 years old. She has refused a most flattering offer from Baron Gumborg to join the Diaghileff organization of the Imperial ballet in a South American tour, in order to remain in New York and continue her lessons in English.

If Richard Bennett accepts an offer which he has just received to go to Australia in August for a 10 weeks' engagement in "Damaged Goods," it will be largely through the persuasion of Mrs. Bennett, whose stage name is Adrienne Morrison, and who plays the role of The Girl in the Brieux play.

Mrs. Bennett's object in urging her husband to accept the antipodal engagement is unique. If the star and producer of "Damaged Goods" does go, of course, Mrs. Bennett and their three little daughters, Constance, Barbara and Joan, will go with him. If he does not go the first half of the fall season of 1934, 1935 will be spent on tour in "Damaged Goods" in the smaller cities, where it will not be practical to take the children on account of the frequent railroad joint-neys. So Mrs. Bennett had practically decided to take the three girls to England in August and put them in school. The thought of the separation, however, has been a very painful one and the Australian tour seems to offer a legitimate excuse for abandoning the earlier plan.

Louis Meyer has just bought out all the original shareholders in the Strand theater, and is now the leaseholder for 30 years. It was built as the Waldorf, and run by the Shuberts at the outset. Then it became the Whitney theater, but with no better luck. But "Mr. W." looks as though it might run there till further orders.

The Messrs. Shubert announce that they have put into rehearsal a new play by Monckton Hoff, entitled "Fantasia." This play created quite a stir in London when it was produced there. A special company has been selected for the interpretation of this play, including Olga Petrova, George Naah and Conway Tearle.

The proposed revival of "Adonis" with Henry Dixey in his old role, has been postponed indefinitely.

A FRENCH BERNARD SHAW WRITES PLAYS BY PROXY

Depends on Faithful Typist to Express Author's Thoughts So They Do Not Clash

France's own Bernard Shaw has come to light in the person of Tristan Bernard, the Parisian playwright, says the Boston Transcript. The similarity shines in an interview which M. Bernard recently gave to a daring reporter.

"How do you write your plays, your humorous plays, I mean?" the interviewer asked with temerity.

"How do I write my plays?" retorted the author, quizzically. "Upon my word, I have been scratching my head for a long time past to know how I did it. It puzzles me now more than it can possibly interest you. But I shall try and think."

"Let me see. I write romances in the country. In Paris I get up regularly at 9 o'clock I breakfast and blow a hunting horn afterwards. I had begun to practice the hunting horn just out of spite to worry a neighbor of mine who used to make too much noise when writing. Yes, it is quite true, he used a very noisy typewriter."

"Once I had begun, I continued blowing the horn every morning out of habit. I wrote half-jests and hesitated as to whether I ought to shave or not. (M. Bernard wears a famous big beard, the biggest in Paris.) But each time I am tempted to cut off my magnificent growth I remember the fact that I have no razor."

"One day I almost bought one, but I was told by the dealer that it was very sharp, and this discouraged me. I left his shop without buying it."

"Between half-past 8 and 10 o'clock I dictate my letters to my secretary. Then I lunch. Then I indulge in some sport, such as climbing up the ladder of my library and putting my books in order. If nobody comes to play a game of bridge with me, I go to supervise the rehearsal of my latest play. I generally dine in the evening, not in uniform. If there is no boxing match at night I go to bed."

"But pardon, master," interrupted the interviewer, "when do you write your comedies?"

"I have no time for that," replied Bernard. "Just wait a moment if the telephone is ringing violently. Yes; you are the manager? The vaudeville is it? Three plays, you said? You wanted one on the first of the month? All right, you shall have them."

Hanging up the receiver, he said to the astonished reporter: "I wonder if they will have the plays ready."

"How 'they'?" asked the reporter.

"My dear friend," replied Bernard, "who is the author of the Bible?"

"God, I suppose."

"No, the writer was Moses, but God is nevertheless the author. In the same way I am the author of my plays. My secretary writes them. Who invents all the fine sayings nowadays? People do it everywhere. I merely collected them and put them in my plays."

"I found the work too tedious, and told my typewriter assistant to do it. She does it splendidly. She cuts out the finest things here and there, pastes them together, as many as are required for each act. If they are too long the impresario can cut them short."

"When a manager asks me for a play, I do as I did a moment ago. I call Virginia my typewriter. Virginia, I ask deferentially, 'can you deliver three acts before the middle of the month?' Virginia says she hopes that it will be easy. She has just received a consignment of 24 cuttings from an agency. I simply tell her to look out that the cuttings do not clash with one another. I cannot afford to repeat the same passages, either."

"But what about the staking, the dialogues, the dramatic personae?"

"Oh, they fall in line automatically. The managers come to me and ask if such a thing were not better in another place. I tell them. Upon my word, I believe that I have found the secret now how I write my plays. Thanks for having come to see me."

In the New York THEATRES

NEW YORK, April 18.—In the excitement of opening the "biggest moving picture house in the world," the beautiful new Strand at Broadway and Forty-seventh street, I find that one of the most important points was overlooked generally.

The principal number on the program, the Selig nine-reel film, "The Spoilers," from the novel by Rex Beach, is the first moving picture feature of this elaborate, to be staged by the Selig Polyscope Co. A few nine-reel films, it is true, but "The Spoilers" makes a distinct new era for American "picturization."

But I must agree that the Strand is notable in itself. It costs $3,000. There is a balcony but no gallery, that sort of horrors, so-called, known by the fashionable but expressive term, "Café heaven," and of the seats, 1,100 are on the first floor.

The decorations are rich but simple. The stage is 100 feet wide. Twelve pipe organs, one on each side and one at the rear, have been built into the stage and in addition an orchestra of 25 musicians, under Carl Edwards' leadership, is heard at every performance.

For exactly half the day, from noon to midnight, the show continues without a break. The highest priced orchestra seat is 25 cents.

A new feature was added to the program of "The Spoilers," the leading actor as one of the spectators, William Farnum, who plays the hero in the Alaskan novel, occupied a stage box with Mrs. Farnum and Mrs. Eustice Farnum. Mr. Farnum had a unique opportunity to study the effect of his acting upon the spectators.

Others I noticed in attendance included Vincent Astor, Isabel Huntington (who will soon be Mrs. Astor), A. L. Erlanger, George M. Cohan, Eve H. Harrick, Dixie Bell, Bob Adamson and innumerable other worthies.

"The Spoilers" makes up the second part of the program at the Strand. It is arranged in three acts. The first part of the program consists of an overture by the orchestra, a picture entitled "A Neapolitan Incident," another orchestra selection, a new event, the quartet number from "Rigoletto," by the Strand quartet, and a Keystone comedy.

The American Film Manufacturing company is reproducing Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting, "The Last Supper," as a "Flying A" picture. The setting for the scene is an exact duplicate of the original. The costumes and the dramatizing are said to be perfect. Sidney Ayres plays the Christus.

the late Clyde Fitch which was received here but did well in London and Berlin, has an excellent revival at the Little theater this week.

Under the hand of playwrights and the play which failed at the Lyric theater in 1907, reached a high artistic level. The well-meaning, but vicious Dixie Walder, who in the last Clara Bloodgood once impersonated lived again in all her feminine frailty. Miss George clothed the character with the compassion that the author intended for it and emphasized the struggle of the weak woman against a moral talent inherited from her melodramatic father.

Mr. Fitch's dialogue, after several years, has preserved its freshness and sparkle and humorously satirical meaning to a surprising extent. A higher degree than any other native playwright, he had the ability to represent the atmosphere and manners of a social life on the stage and since death on the stage has come to take his place. "The Truth" has this effect all the polish and charm of his past work.

But it also displays certain of Fitch's characteristic defects. The principal theme, the study of a character and the consequences of a single act, is weakened by a mere elaboration of a single act. The plot is a mere sequence of events, the interest is in the character of the characters, not in the plot.

"THE FAULTY BIVOC" Cohan and Harris brought one of the funniest shows of the season to the Astor theater this week. "Ragtime" is the chief funmaker. "The Beauty Shop," but he is also a part in a piece that is one of the best to finish.

"The Beauty Shop" is by Rena Wolf and Channing Pollock, with music by Charles I. Gilbert. The best of the show is the star who sings or plays. "All Dressed Up and No Place to Go."

Dr. Arbutus Budd is a beauty doctor with a long list of non-paying patients and an equally long list of angry letters. Mr. Hitchcock is the doctor who is only saved from going to the low street jail for debt by the doctor of an uncle of his ward in Corsica. The uncle is supposed to be well and the creditors send the doctor the rest of the company to be sure Corcoran to collect the money.

The second act is laid in Corsica where Dr. Budd discovers that all dying Corsicans left was a vendetta which the doctor has inherited. See which the doctor has inherited. See which the doctor has inherited.

Next to the star the hit of the evening was scored by Marion Sunshyne, a member of the vaudeville troupe of Tempest and Sunshyne. She appeared as a Spanish dancer who sang.

Among others in the supporting company were Anna Orr, a remarkably pretty girl, who was also short, and long on dancing; Sam, the 31-year-old, who was a 10-year-old.

"THE TRUTH" The play is by Clyde Fitch. It is a play about a play. It is a play about a play.

IN SPITE OF 'COMMON' PLAYERS STILL WRITE 'DOPE'

Johnson Says He's Helpless to Stop Journalists

Most Players Merely Sell Use of Their Names to Newspapermen

By FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Another one of Ban Johnson's bluffs has been called, this time by the players who write the fierce and fearful sounding orders issued by Johnson against the players and many of the managers, too, have contracted with different newspapers or newspaper syndicates to "write" articles for him during the coming season.

In passing it may be said that about 1 per cent of the ball players whose names appear in the papers above analytical headlines do not write them.

A newspaper man writes them. After a brief discussion with the players of the matter the article contains, he players get a big check for lending the use of his name to these articles.

Stiles Up. III. Feeling.

For a number of years past considerable ill-feeling among the players has been engendered through these articles. One of the articles have criticized one other player, whereupon the criticized player promptly became peeved or murmured dire threats in the direction of the "author." The "author" pushed forth the alibi that he didn't write them; that a newspaper man wrote them. But this alibi didn't do much.

Things came to a bad pass just before last world series opened and finally a national commission was forced to the action on the opening of last year's day of the opening combat. After had deliberated for a certain length of time on the question, it summoned a newspaper man into its august presence, and Ban Johnson, acting as spokesman for the body, said:

"In the future no players will be allowed to write signed articles for newspapers or lend their names to such articles. That is final. We find that one of the players who have been riding high contracts that will carry them to live up to those con-

Far at Golf Club Course Lowered From 75 to 71

With the completion of the four new holes which give the Colorado Springs Golf club an 18-hole golf course, par for the course has been lowered from 75 to 71 and the total distance has been cut from 6,550 to 6,133 yards.

The building of new traps and bunkers and the difference between putting on turf greens on the 16 old holes and on sand greens on the new leaves the course almost as difficult for the average player.

Following are the distances and par for the completed course:

Hole	Yds.	Par	Hole	Yds.	Par
1	455	4	10	275	4
2	300	3	11	360	4
3	365	4	12	410	5
4	480	5	13	415	5

6	380	4	15	380	4

tracts. But they will not be allowed to renew those contracts.

"That means that no player will be allowed to write articles or lend his name to newspaper articles next season (1914)," Johnson was asked.

"That's it exactly," replied Johnson. "Any player who attempts to write such articles after this series is over, or who lends his name to such articles, will be dealt with in severe manner."

To show in just what reverence they hold Johnson's threats and the commission's rulings, the players continued to "write" articles throughout the winter. Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins, George Moriarty, Ed Walsh, John McGraw and others "contributed" almost daily articles during the winter.

And now, at the eve of the 1914 season, the same players and some others, as well as some managers, have contracted to furnish newspapers with "stories" throughout the summer. Frank Chance, the Yankees' manager, has contracted to "write" a semi-weekly article throughout the summer. Hugh Jennings of Detroit in another who is said to have attached himself for a contract to "write," the said "writings" to add about $1,000 to his income during the season.

Johnson, up to the early part of January, said he was absolutely certain that the players and managers would obey his orders. But the players and managers didn't. They just went along "writing" as often as the syndicates would take their stuff, and paying as attention to the threat of Johnson.

McGraw's Admits Fault.

Some few weeks ago a complaint over the fact that the players were

Kolehmainen Cut to Lower Three-Mile Record in Race With Other Stars

NEW YORK, April 18.—What promises to be one of the most interesting and closely contested three-mile races, in which the record is likely to be broken, will be run on May 3, at the Vauxhall club games in Celtic park. In this race Hannes Kolehmainen, the little Finnish runner who sprung into prominence in the Olympic games at Stockholm, and has since been leading records in this country, will be pitted against Billy Kramer of the Long Island Athletic club, Harry Smith of the Bronx Church House and one of the Illinois Athletic club. These four are conceded to be the best distance runners in the country today, and with the other stars to push him, Kolehmainen, who now holds a record of 14:22.5 for the distance, will go the limit. The world's record for the three-mile is 14:17.2, made by Alfie Shrubbs, the great South African runner, over the Stamford Bridge track, London, 11 years ago.

Kolehmainen and Ray have met twice on indoor tracks this winter, and each has scored a victory. They will now have the opportunity to settle the question as to which is the better runner.

Ray, Kramer and Smith are fast men at the three-mile distance and will give Kolehmainen a stiff race. Added interest is given the event by the fact that it probably will be the last race the Finn will run in this country, shortly afterwards he leaves for his home in Finland and possibly will decide to remain there. This summer he will make a trip to Sweden, where he will endeavor to smash Jess Boutin's wonderful one-hour record of 11 miles 1,421 yards. Runners who have raced with the Finn in this country say he easily will be able to lower the Frenchman's figures.

SNOW STOPS SACRED HEART GAME; D. U. HERE ON FRIDAY

Ministers Speedy This Year and Tigers Expect Hard Work; "Aggies Not Dangerous"

The Tiger baseball pennant chasers just passed through Denver yesterday and on no conditions would agree to play the Sacred Heart team as per schedule. There was only one plausible reason for this action on the part of our popular collegians. It was SNOW.

After taking a stormy battle from the Aggies, the locals had planned to treat the Catholics to a little exhibition of the pastime, but the Man From Medicine Hat interfered, and three inches of snow covered the diamond.

Next Friday Chancellor Buchtel's Ministers will come to Washburn field for the first local game. The Denver players have had some pretty smart ball teams recently, and this year the critics say is no exception. Edward Rees is doing the pitching and Edward is quoted as claiming to have something. The D. U. infield is fast, and it will be a battle royal, with the edge, of course, Tigerward.

The team has not had as much practice as Coach Rothke thinks they need, due principally to bad weather. From all reports, spring is more backward than for years, and the athletic teams have felt this.

However, this week will be crowded with practice. The team is in good shape, and Jackson is feeling quite well, thank you.

Grizzlies Buy Barbour to Hold Down Third Base

LINCOLN, Neb., April 18.—Manager Jack Coffey of the Denver Western league club, today announced the purchase from the Chicago American league team of Lewis Barbour, third baseman, who played with Lincoln for two years and was sold to the Chicago team at the end of last season. Barbour is expected to join the Denver club during the Lincoln series.

The Denver management also announced the acquisition of Pitcher Fred White of the Danville, Ill., club of the Three I league.

NEW HALF-MILE RECORD IN STANFORD-CALIFORNIA MEET

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., April 18.—E. M. Bonnett of Stanford broke the Pacific coast half-mile record here today in a meeting between the University of California and Leland Stanford, Jr., university. Bonnett did the distance in 1:54.2-5, as against the record of 1:56.2-5, held by Edmondson of Seattle.

Six Stanford-California records were broken. Stanford won the meet, 61-5 to 51-4, winning 20 events.

MORAN'S STATEMENT SPEEVE JACK 'AH'LL GET HIM' SAYS CHAMPION

NEW YORK, April 12.—It's too hard for Frank Moran, of Pittsburgh, that he didn't learn a wee bit sooner that in some instances, "Silence is golden."

Because he didn't, and because he wasn't even discreetly silent, for the first few days after his return from Europe, he has angered "The Aghhah" Johnson, a colored punching person, which means that Frank is due for a nice little beating in Paris on June 27.

Frank, it may be recalled, is matched to meet Johnson, the heavyweight champion of the world, at the place and on the date just mentioned above. Immediately after the match was made Moran called from Paris to these shores, probably for the secret purpose of giving his relatives and the scene of his childhood one last fond look. Publicly he said it was because he wanted to condition himself here for his battle.

Moran Shouted Loudly.

Well, to proceed with the story, Frank, upon landing, began to issue boastful statements regarding what he would do to Johnson and belittling statements concerning the prowess of the ebony person.

Frank shouted as loud as his lusty lungs would permit, that he would knock out Johnson in 12 rounds "and perhaps less" that "Johnson has gone back" and that "Johnson is a wreck from dissipation."

In due course of time these statements, printed in sassy looking type in numerous American papers, reached that giddy city of Paris. Also they reached Mr. Johnson who took out his specs, applied them to his eyes, and then focused the eyes upon the sporting pages, giving the statements the up and down, the once over and several other things that one gives to something that is utterly insignificant.

In equipping Mr. Johnson with specs we are assuming what might be poetic license. It is not generally known in this country that the colored wallpaper wears specs. Nor have we any authentic information to that effect. But we have Mr. Moran's word for it that Mr. Johnson is a wreck, and it's our idea that one cannot be a physical wreck without also being almost blind. Therefore, we have given Mr. Johnson a pair of specs. If he doesn't need them he can send them back.

But it matters not whether Johnson absorbed Moran's remarks through the medium of specs or not. The fact is that he absorbed them. And he said that the offender Johnson looked at those remarks of the second rate American "white hope" the greater became his anger and indignation.

Jack Will Really Train.

"Ah was gwine to jess let that fellah down kinda easy like," snorted Johnson, "but ah've changed mah mind. I'm gwine to train good now and I'm gwine to give Moran the weat lickin' I evah gave any man in mah life."

Whereupon, Johnson who had taken the Moran match something in the nature of a joke, and who didn't intend to do any vigorous training, started in to condition himself in as earnest a manner as he trained for his match when he took the "title from Jeffries."

Johnson just now is said to weigh over 250. And he has grown bulky amidsthips and his once "wonderful muscles are softened and covered with layers of fat. And if you wish to take Moran's word for it, his wind is gone, his speed is a minus quality and he's quite generally on the fritz.

Make Him Eat His Words.

"Ah reckon ah am some pounds ovah weight," remarked Johnson at the outset of his training, "and ah knows that jest now ah wouldn't be able to fight like a champion. But ah've got ovah two months to get into shape and ah'm gwine to get into shape—get into such condition that Mistah Moran will be a mightily fooled puison. And when ah gets Mistah Moran into the ring with me you all can depend upon it that ah won't forget what that Moran puison said about me. I'll make him eat his words. And ah'll show him a few tricks about fightin' that he hein't learned before. When ah gets through with Mistah Moran ah think ah'll have convinced the people in America that Moran was so'n mistaken when he said ah'm all in."

Johnson, some week ago, started training by doing light road work. Each day he increased the distance traveled, and it is said that the exercise is taking off a lot of the bulk. Johnson intends devoting the last month before the fight in gymnasium work.

STANFORD WINS RIGHT TO MAKE HONOLULU TRIP

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., April 18.—By winning 3 to 2 today's baseball game with Leland Stanford, Jr., university, the University of California won the series and will go to Honolulu to play, the expenses of the trip being borne by subscription among the islanders.

COFFEY BEATS KENNEDY

NEW YORK, April 18.—Jim Coffey, the "Dublin Giant" outknighted Tom Kennedy of New York in a 10-round bout here tonight. Coffey had the better of almost every round.

Coffey weighed 187 pounds and his opponent was 10 pounds heavier.

Gould and Huhn Keep National Tennis Title

BOSTON, April 18.—Jay Gould and W. H. T. Huhn of Philadelphia "scooped" fully defended their title of national court tennis doubles champions today by defeating George R. Fearing, Jr., and C. T. Russell of Boston. In the final match of the championship contest at the Tennis and Racquet club. They won in straight sets, 6-3, 6-5, 6-4.

LONDON, April 18.—Walter Kinsella, the New York professional, today beat Peter W. Latham, former world's professional champion, by three sets to love in a court tennis match at the Prince's club. The score was 6-0, 6-4, 6-4.

Overland

The Car of Service and Beauty

Few men have identical reasons for buying an automobile, but the OVERLAND satisfies them all.

One man has a liking for mechanics. The masterful construction of the Overland delights him.

There is another man to whom mechanics is a closed book. This same perfection of construction settles his possible doubts.

Its beauty delights the fastidious its riding qualities suggest a flight through the air. Its first cost and economy of operation put it within reach of all who can afford an automobile.

It has long, graceful lines, roominess of body, deep Turkish upholstery, a perfect thirty-five-horse power motor and every mechanical perfection throughout.

It is equipped with Gray & Davis engine starter and generator, a starter that will start your motor every time, and the same starter which is used on cars selling for five and seven thousand dollars. The center control and large eighteen-inch steering wheel, free from vibration, make it a pleasure to drive, and the gear shifts are so easy to make it appeals to every one.

Already we have sold almost twice as many as during 1913. There are only a few roadsters to be had. We have two touring cars on the floor now and we invite you to see them and take a ride with us, for the OVERLAND makes life worth the living. It puts you next door to nature in all her varying seasonal charms—next door to your office the theater—your friends in distant towns. It takes you away from the daily grime and grind of life, refreshing you with new scenes and fresh air.
